PRESIDENT'S ROOM

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE CLASS OF 1903:

As the date of your Fiftieth Reunion draws near, I have been afforded the welcome opportunity, through this foreword in the Fifty-Year Book of 1903, to send to each of you a word of cordial greeting. This I am happy to do, personally and officially.

We have all invariably attached particular importance to the anniversary marking five decades in the life of a Princeton class. For many years - until now I hope it has become traditional - the facilities of the Graduate College, so admirably suited to the purpose, have been set aside for the Fiftieth Reunion. In these pleasant surroundings year after year classes have gathered to mark the milestone beyond which they enter the goodly and distinguished company of what one might consider Princeton's elder statesmen.

Over these fifty years your class has written another inspiring page in the history of loyalty to Princeton. And this history of class loyalties, to each other as individuals, to the University as a common heritage, is the very life-blood of the place.

May you long continue to occupy the position you have established in the warm affections of the whole Princeton family. Greetings and good luck to you all.

Harold Dodds

January 1, 1953.

Editor's Note

πολλοὺς προλόγους ἔχω λέγειν

This is the record of half a century of what is probably a typical Princeton class, although we like to think of it as one of the Great Classes of the University.

We can boast no President of the United States nor even a nominee for the Presidency. But we have numbered among us diplomats, statesmen, political and civic leaders, eminent scientists, missionaries, scholars and educators, men who have achieved distinction as lawyers, jurists, physicians, writers, engineers, architects, manufacturers, merchants, philosophers, publishers, corporation presidents, farmers, bankers, Government administrators, clergymen, and four Princeton Trustees, more than any other class.

When Whitney Darrow edited our Decennial Record, most of us were on the threshold of our careers. Shirley Carr's monumental Twenty-Year Record told our story as it was when we were in our forties and the pattern of our lives was fairly evident. Now, we are merging with history. Perhaps some, like Sam Higginbottom, will still bring forth fruit in our old age, but as to most of us

We sit and take our ease
We do as we damn please and the story can be written with some degree of finality. So this volume, while by no means our swan song, is presumably our last formal record.

The task of preparing it has been a pleasant one, made possible by the splendid cooperation of the Class. Ned Scudder made available certain of the facilities of his great newspaper organization, both in getting data and in tracking down "lost persons." Research by Chick Hewitt was very helpful. Your Secretary is more than grateful to Walter Hollenbach for his painstaking work in editing copy and for helping in the reading of proof. The writer of the "Exploits," an "old grad" of the late thirties merits a vote of thanks, too, but he has asked to remain anonymous. The photographic skill of Miss Elizabeth Menzies of Princeton is embodied in the frontispiece and in the pictures of the 1903 Dormitory. And finally, a sincere word of appreciation is due to Harold Van Wart, '18, who added something of the Princeton Spirit to the otherwise mechanical task of his Progress Publishing Company in manufacturing this volume.

The President's Message

To The Class of 1903

The survivors of the heterogeneous group of boys that gathered in Princeton near the end of the last century to form the Class of 1903 are about to celebrate their golden anniversary of graduation at a glorious reunion in the Graduate College. When that reunion ends, these boys of yesteryear will be elevated by way of an imposed, well intended but little appreciated, beatification to the Nirvana of The Old Guard. In retrospect the fifty years have passed so fleetingly that we are stubborn in our refusal to see ourselves as others see us, men of seventy plus, too old to join hereafter in the line of march to the baseball game with Yale.

How long is this half-century span? How comes the anomaly of feeling the same as ever, while the verdict of friends and family, backed up by Biblical precept, is that care must be exercised at every step for in living so long we have already exceeded our allotment? Vivid memories of undergraduate episodes and intervening reunions cry aloud that the span is really a very short time indeed.

The contemporaneously impalpable progress through early competition in the world of affairs, thence to positions of some assurance in our communities, to honors, rewards, respect in our chosen walks of life, to a lessening of activity here and there, the receding hair line, the whitened thatch, winters in Florida, and retirement, the future becoming the present and the present melting into the past, gave us no pause, nor cause for that matter, to tote the accumulation of years that were piling up behind us. Too, intense curiosity as to what's going to happen tomorrow and the next day and year belies the heresy that we have already witnessed more than our share of history in the making.

No, neither review of our experiences nor contemplation of our prospects furnishes an impressive measure of the quinquagintennium.

Now about projecting an equal period from 1903 back to 1853? There transpired an eon, if there ever was an eon, as compared with our own fifty years. Franklin Pierce was president. The nation, 23,000,000 strong, was flexing its strength after the war with Mexico; railroads were pushing their way across the continent; bloody Indian attacks were to continue for thirty years; the economy was agricultural, our ancestors, farmers; the age of steam was largely in the realm of prophecy, illiteracy was rife, immigration teeming; the rising and setting of the sun limited the workday; the boys were in their childhood who were to fight the Civil War in the following decade. Can it be gainsaid that a fellow who voted in 1852 would certainly be a doddered oldster at our commencement?

To make a cognate estimate we must omit from consideration the intervening years and in one jump compare the manner of living in 1903 with the present. Thence we'll derive a perspective of the half century, a more realistic appreciation of how long it has been since we boosted Sam Higginbotton through a car window of the Junction train, the first man of our class to set forth a graduate from the ivied walls of Princeton.

Then, as in 1853, the United States had lately fought a foreign war; a foreign war that had taken our navy to the other side of the globe to conquer far away lands. Proud as we were of the hero, Admiral Dewey, all decried the possibility of embroiling our country in the quarrels of the world. Isolation, first recommended by George Washington, was the unanimous desire of the people. The nation was self-sufficient. Cities were outgrowing their boundaries with but little planning, no zoning. Steam was giving way to electricity. There was no income tax, no federal estate tax, no social security. Government rested lightly upon the citizenry. Charlie Dugro alone among our classmates possessed an automobile. Shanks' mare, the bicycle, buggy, trolley car were our means of local travel. The Ford Motor Company was in the making. The flying machine was yet to take its first leap from the ground. Colleges were restricted in enrollment and retained in large measure their pristine classical pattern.

How different is the present! The finger of scorn is pointed at the isolationist. We are waging an undeclared war in Asia to protect natives of a land we knew vaguely as the Hermit Kingdom in 1903. Every continent and many islands furnish bases for our military strength. Our numbers exceed 150,000,000. Higher education, or shall we say college education, is accessible to all. Nuclear fission perfected for destruction promises to provide an unlimited source of commercial power. Throughout the world the conception that the state exists for the people has given way to the opposite theory that citizens exist for the state and a vassalage evolves taking the form of confiscatory taxation in the half of the world to which we belong and arbitrary deprivation of property, liberty, and life itself in the remainder. Such innovations as the gasoline engine, moving pictures, radio, television, radar, aviation, air conditioning, synthetic fabrics, have brought about a new manner of material existence.

It does not require the wisdom of a sage to discern so complete a revolution in our way of thinking and living as could not be accomplished in short order. The reluctant conclusion is borne in upon us that the past fifty years, one thirty-ninth of the time elapsed since One A. D., have been of quite as long duration and have witnessed quite as great a change as the preceding period of similar length.

In the vernacular of the day someone will exclaim "So What!" Just this; read the following book prepared with painstaking care by our eminent secretary, Earle Anderson, ably assisted by Holly Hollenbach. As you review class meetings and read of the careers of classmates, sadness at the passing of the good old times will give way to happy reminiscence of Princeton and the recollection of pleasant association with your fellows of 1903. In the changing world there has been no deterioration of these longstanding friendships. Tom Plunkett, attending a Princeton Inn week-end after an absence of many years from class gatherings, remarked: "It seems you have saved a place for me for twenty years." At our 40th, Howard Ameli completed the explanation of an inside baseball play that had been interrupted at our 10th. This book will serve as a memorabilium of class history and more importantly as an incentive to attendance at our last great reunion.

Cato, who rendered the declining years so attractive, omits, no doubt because he had no opportunity of being a Princeton man, the most gracious experience of those who are aging, namely, association with their contemporaries.

The mellowing of the years as a rule has promoted consideration for our fellow men. An example comes to mind. At the 45th, to a rather positive statement of McPheeters, that well-beloved master of disquisition (formerly I should have written disputation), Henry Kays to the surprise of those within earshot, quietly rejoins, "Tom, your reasoning is unanswerable, your conclusion dispositive." Was Tom taken aback? I think so, but with venerable noblesse oblige he retorts "Henry, if my neck is ever in jeopardy I'll have you for my lawyer." Judgments become less censorious. Gar Scott who has witnessed as many football games as any of us, after fifty years finally vouchsafed that the Princeton team played well nigh errorless football in New Haven last fall.

When in the presence of those of our own age we can make comforting comparisons. A classmate walks by with a spry step. How easy to say "There go I." Another hobbles along on a cane. What more natural than to entertain the thought "How fortunate am I."

Any reader who has not signified his intention of meeting with his classmates in Princeton where the class originated fifty-four years ago will experience a nostalgic urge to sign up on reading the story of reunions for the past twenty-five years and the biographies of his fellows.

Compensations of twilight years permit us all to accede to the thesis of the essayist in De Senectute as rendered in verse by Sir John Denham:

> The Force which Nature gives, with care retain,
> But when decay'd, 'tis folly to complain;
> In Age to wish for Youth is full as vain,
> As for a Youth to turn a Child again.

Whether attending the big Round-Up in Princeton this coming June or remaining at home let us join in a prayer once uttered by a very grateful character:

"God Bless Us Everyone."

A Bit of History

μὴ μόνον ἀσχολεῖν ὀρθῶς
ἀλλὰ καὶ σχολάξειν καλῶς

(Required reading for those who have not been regular attendants at Reunions. May be omitted by others)

This chapter is written to record, in permanent form but briefly, the series of Reunions, formal and informal, since our Twentieth, that will culminate in our Fiftieth in June of 1953, when we enter the sacred ranks of the Old Guard.

The story of our earlier reunions will be found in the Quinquennial Record, edited by Howard Ameli and published in 1909; in the Decennial Record, edited by Whitney Darrow with the effective, if somewhat mysterious, assistance of one Mae Belle Kelleher, and published in 1914; and in the monumental Twenty-Year Record of the Class of 1903 that Shirley Carr produced with the help of a corps of learned historians, and which was distributed to us in 1923. Our present history begins, therefore, with

THE TWENTY-FIFTH REUNION.

June 14-17, 1928

Alex Stobo was Reunion Chairman as we came to the Quarter-Century post, and Ned Scudder, as Chairman of the Sports Committee, presided over the activities of our athletes and pseudo athletes.

Reunion headquarters were at Edgerstoune, the estate that Archibald D. Russell had created on the western outskirts of Princeton. The large house, with its many bedrooms, extensive kitchens, dining rooms and spacious lounges gave a country-club atmosphere to our reunion, enhanced by the surrounding terraces, lawns and walks, all contributing greatly to the enjoyment of the 189 members of the Class who attended.

None of us will easily forget the delightful reception given to us and our wives at Drumthwacket by Mrs. Moses Taylor Pyne and Percy, on Friday afternoon, or the reception given that evening at our Headquarters by the Class to members of the University Faculty of 1899-1903, presided over by Col. Byles and followed by the reception to the Class of 1878, celebrating its Fiftieth, Curl Pierson presiding while Sigmund Spaeth and M'Cready Sykes helped us "Whoop-er-up for naughty-three, a jolly set of men."

Two events of great historical significance marked our Twenty-Fifth; the presentation by Nig Couch, on behalf of Ike Roberts, of the famous Roberts Bowl, and the laying of the corner-stone of the Class of 1903 Dormitory, Whitney Darrow presenting the Dormitory on behalf of the Class and President Hibben accepting it for the University, while Edgar Palmer turned the sod for the cornerstone.

This Reunion led also to the establishment of the Daffodil Cup by Ned Scudder. The Committee heads had done much of their Reunion planning at a week-end at Ned's place in Rumson, where, despite their strenuous official duties, they had taken time out for some golf. In May of the following year a similar gathering was held at the Princeton Inn, with Ned as host. Meanwhile, the cartoonist of the Newark Evening News had designed for Ned a special trophy, which he presented, to be contested for from time to time in golf matches when members of the Class foregathered at the Inn. The daffodils were in bloom when the Committee first met, and served as a motive for the designer of the trophy, the Daffodil Cup, pictured elsewhere in this volume. It was first won by Alex Stobo. There have been ten holders so far, the latest, and present holder, Bill Barr, who won it in October 1935, in June 1949 and again in 1950.

The Wilkes-Barre Band headed our Pee-Rade to Saturday's Yale game, and at the Class meeting Al Smith was elected President, Shirley Carr Vice-President, Alex Stobo Secretary and Edgar Palmer Reunion Chairman.

THIRTIETH REUNION

JUNE 14 - 18, 1933

Our Thirtieth Reunion centered around the Sloane House on Bayard Lane, made available to us for headquarters by Edgar Palmer. A hundred and four men attended, many of us sleeping at the Theological Seminary.

This reunion was marked by the first of our Class Memorial Services, in memory of classmates who have died. John Steen conducted the service on Friday afternoon in the University Chapel, Morgan Ashley and Sam Higginbottom assisting, with John Warbeke at the organ.

The reunion was notable also for our inspection of the Class of 1903 Dormitory, the cornerstone of which we had laid five years before and which had meanwhile become a reality.

And Harold Dodds had been elected President of the University and was to be inaugurated at the Commencement exercises following our reunion week-end. He came to our Class meeting Friday evening, and with his introduction to us by Acting President Duffield began our acquaintance with the fourth of the Presidents of Princeton to hold office during our four-and-fifty years.

The East Orange Legion Band led our Pee-rade to Osborne Field, where, just as we passed through the gateway, the heavens were opened and the deluge descended.

Edgar Palmer was elected President at our Class meeting, Charlie Beury Vice President, Ned Scudder Secretary and Ellis Pierson Reunion Chairman.

THIRTY-FIFTH REUNION
JUNE 16 - 19, 1938

Ellis Pierson began his service of fourteen years as Reunion Chairman. More than half the Class registered at our Thirty-fifth (122 out of 240 then on the Class Roll), and like our Thirtieth, we had headquarters at the Sloane House on Bayard Lane through the courtesy of Edgar Palmer.

The Reunion began with a dinner given at the Nassau Tavern by the Class President, Edgar Palmer, with special lighting by zinc-vapor lamps that Harvey Rentschler had invented, and which Harvey explained to us.

This Reunion was marked by the first appearance with us of the famous Firko String Band, who led our Pee-rade and who have since become a traditional part of 1903 Reunions, including our soon-to-be-celebrated FIFTIETH. Organized to partake in Philadelphia's annual "Mummers Parade," where it takes first prize with great regularity, it was referred to as "undoubtedly the most remarkable band ever seen in Princeton." Attired in cloth-of-silver costumes, a mixture of Elizabethan and the wild ideas of Hollywood, with ostrich plumes and colored capes, hats two feet wide, and playing guitars and mandolins instead of the usual brass instruments, they led the way to the field amid the delighted gasps of Princeton's colored population.

Sunday afternoon our dignified and impressive memorial service in the University Chapel was conducted by John Steen, with John Warbeke at the organ, the invocation by George Scott and the lesson by Robert Young, while Class President Charlie Beury read the "In Memoriam."

At the Class meeting, Charlie Beury had been elected President, Ellis Pierson Vice President and Reunion Chairman, and Bill Coulter Secretary.

FORTIETH REUNION
JUNE 10 - 13, 1943

With our country at war, all formal reunions, with their customary festivities, were suspended at Princeton. We gathered, instead, 65 of us, for an informal and quiet week-end at the Princeton Inn.

It was the general feeling that this was the most enjoyable reunion we had ever had. Curl Pierson, as Reunion Chairman, made ideal arrangements for us at the Inn. Wicker chairs, provided especially for us, with tables and umbrellas, and the wonderful setting of the lawn and terraces of the Inn, and the creature comforts of the hostelry itself, combined to give us a degree of comfort that was especially appealing. So satisfying was this war-time gathering of the Class that the June 1903 week-end at the Princeton Inn has become an annual affair, and other classes have followed our lead.

Our customary memorial service was held in the University Chapel, and as it happened, resulted in an incident that has remained a matter of great pride to its hero, who, a layman, has since continued to congratulate himself on having conducted a religious service from the Chancel of that inspiring edifice. It came about this way: The ministerial member of the Class who was to conduct the service failed to appear. Al Smith and Ben Messler thereupon informed the Reunion Chairman that he would have to conduct the service, and prescribed three cocktails to prepare him for that duty. The Chairman, limiting himself to two, took himself a solitary walk to organize in his mind his unexpected task. As we marched from the Inn to the Chapel, he tried to untangle several lines of thought for an address, but had, as he believed, little success. What he actually said seems to have left no impression in his memory, but no less a person than Corwin Howell was unstinted in his praise, perhaps for the content of the address, perhaps for its brevity.

At the Class meeting Saturday evening, Bill Coulter was elected President, Ellis Pierson Vice President and Reunion Chairman, and Ben Messler Secretary.

Forty-Fifth Reunion
June 10 - 13, 1948

The usual week-end at the Princeton Inn, June 3-6, was followed, a week later, by our formal reunion under the Chairmanship of Curl Pierson. Headquarters at 22 Dickinson Street were shared with '04, who were celebrating a delayed Fortieth, their regular 40th reunion having fallen during the war years. Sixty-seven of our Class registered at the reunion, and twenty five were present during the earlier week-end at the Inn.

This reunion saw the advent of our new hat bands, designed for us by Charlie Wrenn, with 1903 in traditional orange between two tigers rampant. More of these bands will be available for our FIFTIETH.

The memorial service in the University Chapel on Friday afternoon was conducted by Danny Daniel, assisted by Sam Higginbottom and with Jim Cassidy singing the Class Ode. On the way to the memorial service the Class paused to lay a wreath on the memorial to Edgar Palmer in Palmer Square, with Mrs. Palmer and President Dodds present.

In the tent behind the Dickinson Street house, reunion festivities embodied the spirit of old-time reunions, with the terpsichorean exploits of Henry Kays a feature.

The Ferko String Band was again with us on Saturday, giving us a concert at headquarters during the buffet luncheon followed by a concert on the Front Campus, and leading us in the Pee-rade to the ball game, their costumes an indescribable combination of white and red satin and feathers, with the general outward effect of something between Incas and Cherubim.

At the Class meeting, Ben Messler was elected President, Curl Pierson Vice President and Reunion Chairman, and Earle Anderson Secretary. (Note: On the death of Ben Messler in January, 1952, Curl Pierson became President, and at a Class meeting during the week-end at the Inn in June Bob McNamara was elected Vice President and Karl Frederick Reunion Chairman.)

FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY PARTY
SEPTEMBER 24, 1949

Early in 1949, President Ben Messler conceived the idea that in September of that year the Class should celebrate the Fiftieth Anniversary of its arrival as Freshmen in Princeton.

Accordingly, a Birthday Party was held at the Princeton Inn on the afternoon and evening of September 24th. A feature of the party was a Museum Exhibit, organized in three departments; a Department of Ancient History, featuring group pictures and scenes of 1899; a Department of Mid-Evil History showing reunions and other Class affairs through the years; and a Department of Modern History containing candid pictures of members of the Class, taken in recent years during our informal week-end gatherings at the Inn.

At the dinner that evening two of our teachers of undergraduate days were with us, Professors Eisenhart and Parrot, together with President Dodds. The event reached two separate climaxes, one when Avent Childress, in chef's cap and apron, brought in the Birthday Cake to be cut by President Ben Messler, the other a narrative by Ben of our life as entering Freshmen and punctuated by dramatic scenes of major events in Princeton in the fall of 1899, enacted with great feeling by various members of the Class.

There follows, for the record, a condensation of this nostalgic address, omitting however the text of the dramatic interludes, which could only be reproduced in person, and which must, therefore, be left to the memory of those present and to the imagination of the others.

HISTORICAL NARRATIVE

(Condensed)

Presented at

1903's FIFTIETH BIRTHDAY PARTY

September 24, 1949

by BENJAMIN E. MESSLER

President Dodds, Most Honoured and Most Welcome Guests, Gentlemen of 1903:

We are fifty years and four days old tonight. We are back at Nassau Hall. We are the greatest and the best class that ever entered and graduated from Princeton. But you who knew us then, mentors and patterns of our earlier years, are few, and jealousy and envy have many tongues and strident voices.

I suppose Dean Heermance who, I understand, has been advised by counsel not to be present tonight, has been led by malicious report to believe that if he had been in the Radamanthine chair in the good year 1899, there would have been no Class of 1903 at all. Nothing could be further from the truth. Although we were up to that time the largest class ever to enter Princeton, had we been hatched by the jovial Dean we would have been much larger. The 350 of us who did enter would have constituted the upper tenth of the applicants seeking to meet his exigent requirements.

Scholastic standards were higher then, and they were ruthlessly imposed. If we flunked entrance arithmetic we made it up—as one member of the Class did four days before Commencement. I am told that today you need take no entrance examinations at all if you are in the upper brackets of a small enough school. If we elected calculus and it back-fired, we were kept on the firing-line until we conquered or died—we could not substitute a summer's course beneath the elms in the English Novel.

I make no criticism of these modern depressions in the paths of learning, I merely point out that for us no short cut existed, no escape or compromise was possible, that we, as it might be with joy or with tears and sweat, dragged light or weary feet up the sheer sides of Parnassus.

It was to such training that we owe that unique combination of intellectual brilliance and hard common sense for which our Class is famous.

That the actions of such men and their great and wondrous deeds, as Herodotus says, should not be dimmed by time, it has seemed perhaps worthwhile to bring back to you a few brief scenes from our Freshman days.

There is a bitter dispute, I am told, among writers of biography, as to whether the story of a life should begin at birth or at some pre-natal stage. The story of 1903 had better begin at birth. An inquiry into pre-natal influences and activities might reveal matters which had better not be brought to light—where, for instance, did Smith, the Orange-man, really come from?

Who started Clancy with his throat-cleaner and desert-companion? Or Scudder, the tadpole fisher-boy who has never grown up?

There are no known photographs of Caesar crossing the Rubicon or of our arrival in Princeton. Aside from their historic significance, these two events must have had a certain physical similarity—hordes of infantry piling off the train, laden with overcoats, with suitcases, with rubbers and canteens, with golf clubs and tennis racquets, with instruments of music! On the station platform ranks of the horse-hatted sophomores, waiting, and the uproar of jeers, laughter, shouting, and unkind remarks.

For two weeks, and more than two weeks, the sound of "Freshman, hit it up" was never out of our ears. It was a chorus at freshman eating-clubs, at recitations, at football practice, at Homeric battles around the walls of Nassau. Each night as the clock struck nine we had to go rapidly to our rooms.

Who does not remember the sophomore baseball game, and afterward the long fight with fence pickets up William Street from University Field to the campus? Or the first Class meeting in the old gym where Al Smith, as usual, had everything rigged—and where the statue of the infant Hercules, fig leaf lost and strong points picked out in green, looked down on a scene of carnage never equaled on the plains of Troy?

The Cannon-rush. The gathering of the Class at the foot of University Place: the stealthy P-rade up University Place and along Nassau Street to the campus; Bill Edwards, standing at the campus entrance and grabbing by the collar and yanking out every man who weighed over 150 pounds, shouting, "Come out of there, you damned freshman!"

Then the cane-spree in front of Witherspoon. Our spreer Norm Donald and our sophomore spreer Bill Coulter, are here tonight.

If it was Bill Newell who broke the lion, it was Bill Coulter who stole the clapper. And in those days the University did not keep barrels of new clappers on hand, to destroy the benefits of the theft of the old one.

All these activities were shared more or less by all of us. There was another and more private life. Who does not remember casual glimpses of Darrow purveying kerosene, of Higgins stealing coal, of Barr reading trot in Bill Roper's window on Nassau Street, of Baird climbing lamp posts, of Decker and Scott and Scudder singing and dancing with all their might in the streets of Princeton, as David in the streets of Jerusalem?

These were the birth-pangs of 1903.

Fifty years ago our purpose in Princeton was simple—the attainment of wisdom, the perfection of character.

Gentlemen of the faculty of those days, to admire how that purpose was accomplished you have only to look at us now. Behold your handiwork!

The procedure was not without difficulties, on both sides. There is, I suppose, a certain inevitable attrition in a faculty, as there certainly is in the most intelligent and diligent of classes. That attrition may have been the subject of mutual aid—it may well have resulted in mutual benefit.

Among our early guides in Bible history was a gentleman fresh from the mould and still red from the kiln, whose every physical quality demanded the name of "Cherub." His other name, I think, was Laughlin. His class became the recognized Barnum & Bailey of Princeton. From newspapers to craps, from craps to dog-fights, from dog-fights to fresh fires, from fresh fires to Roman candles, the gay way ran. At the last lecture the door was locked and the key to the room, which was on the top floor of Dickinson, was thrown out of the window. There was a two hour celebration by the Class above and by all the rest of the college below. The examination also, in 21 Dickinson, was conducted to the music of three separate bands, one at each entrance to the room, and the picture of "Cherub" sprinting from door to door and breathlessly expostulating until final exhaustion laid him low, remains one of the most vivid in Bible history.

There is the other side of the picture—a good many other sides. You may remember the dark Sunday morning in Chapel, before we had realized what manner of giant he was, when a rapidly increasing chorus of coughing started toward the end of a rather long sermon by President Patton. Then the quick lift of the eyes from the page, the quick look around the congregation, the drawling, "Gentlemen, there seems to be a sudden epidemic of colds. It will do you no good. I still have a few pearls to cast."

But of all the painful hours of freshman year the most painful, I think you will agree, were those spent in the pursuit of that cruel and impure goddess Urania, Muse of Mathematics, the wasted and irretrievable hours lost on Fine's "funny functions." I do not believe they were inflicted on us as a subject of study, but solely as a moral discipline. I once asked Johnny Hun why we had them, which he could not answer, and how we got through them, and he said that a mark of 15 gave first group. Karl Frederick, I believe, got first group. Look at him now.

Various recollections stand out, great and small. The Yale game and Poe's kick. The championship bonfire, with its fences and shacks and vacant houses—in and out—that we collected for it. Our own Freshman team, with a victory over Yale by 19 to 6.

The two tin bathtubs in the old gym, the only bathing facilities in college.

Going out for the Princetonian, a full-time job in those days. The musical clubs and Triangle. Initiation into Hall, which excused from recitations the next day—the real reason for the Class' almost unanimous membership. The keg parties in Keg Hollow.

The rooming house at the head of Vandeventer Avenue occupied by men who wanted to, or had to, stand in well with the Proctor.

Whoever was there will remember the great exploit of 1902 in getting through Paul Van Dyke's sophomore history. He had told them that they could get off one question on the examination paper of ten questions for each one of the three volumes of Motley's Revolt of the Netherlands they read or heard read. They coralled thirty or forty freshmen one night just before exams, as well as before dinner, took them to a house afar off, where they had collected on a big table all the volumes of all the copies of the History in Princeton, and made them read Motley all night. Fifteen or twenty men, beginning fifty pages apart, read at once at full speed and as each finished fifty pages he went into the next room and was given sandwiches and beer and the next shift went to work. It has been said—I think with truth—that it was 1903 that put 1902 through college.

There were memorable instructors. "Bunny" Reed in math, at whose feet one day in class appeared a mouse, which remained there in an attitude of prayer while "Bunny" first tried to continue the recitation and then to quiet the timorous class.

"Quamquam" Robinson, in Latin composition, who with chalk in one hand and eraser in the other began each hour at the blackboard in one corner of the classroom, talking and writing and erasing all at once with incredible speed, and so finished the hour at the other end of the room, shouting as the bell began to ring, "Gentlemen, forget all that I have told you: only remember that quamquam always takes the indicative." We have not forgotten it.

Probably the clearest recollections center around horsing, as we knew it. They are too many and too varied to recount. But they culminate at Washington's Birthday—another birthday, like this, of earth-shaking importance—with its painting forays, its fights with 1902, its charge of the water-tower.

Our freshman year at Princeton was an eventful year in Princeton history. Percy Pyne won the individual intercollegiate golf championship soon after we entered college, being the first man in the Class to receive a varsity letter. The Washington's Birthday debate was for the first time won by a freshman, Col. Byles. A census of undergraduate reading showed that the most widely read book was ROBINSON CRUSOE. The Stafford Little lectures were established and ex-President Grover Cleveland gave the first series. Murray Hall was finished with the addition of Dodge. Admiral Dewey's train was stopped at the junction and college went over to the Junction to greet him. His speech as recorded was, "I thank you for this demonstration." The Trenton trolley was finally extended into Princeton and the Princetonian records that proctor Topley remonstrated when the new trolley brought fair females from Trenton with paper bags carrying their lunches to be eaten on the campus. The Princeton Alumni Weekly was started in April 1900 under the editorship of Jesse Lynch Williams. The Western Alumni Association and many associations in the east started a vigorous campaign for alumni representation on the Board of Trustees, with the result that the following fall the alumni trustee plan was adopted. One of the first issues of the Alumni Weekly has an editorial on Princeton poverty and says that funds must come chiefly from the alumni and that the days of large giving from others than graduates seem to be about over. Remember! This appeal was written in 1900 by Jesse Lynch Williams and not to-day by Ward B. Chamberlin.

We have gone through the year and are now up to final examinations. It is June 1900.

This brief account of our more formal reunions might, perhaps, be supplemented by a categorical list, with or without details, of our many Midwinter Class dinners and other gatherings, sometimes at the University Club in New York (preceded by cocktails with Bill Coulter as our gracious host), sometimes elsewhere, but it would make dry reading.

In recent years, a new custom has grown up, as many of us have migrated to Florida, some to make that sunny state their home, some to escape from the ice and snow. Bun Wilson started it, by organizing a mid-winter Class weekend and dinner in Florida, first at the Clewiston Inn, and later, under the chairmanship of Jim Dear at the Mountain Lake Club, whose gate was opened to us by Bob Rinehart, '04. Here, in the midst of the orange groves, we have gathered, those of us who were not too far away, for a 1903 Reunionlet.

* * * *

As this volume goes to press, our thoughts and our plans are centered on our FIFTIETH REUNION. Karl Frederick, as Reunion Chairman, aided by such a skilled staff of assistants as only 1903 can command, will make history that cannot yet be written. But as we gather at our Reunion Headquarters at the Graduate College this June, in the Year of Our Lord Nineteen Hundred and Fifty Three

We will banish care and sadness
As we turn our memories back,
And recall those days of gladness
'Neath the Orange and the Black.

Exploits of Woodrow's First-Born

"* * * there is properly no history, only biography * * *"
RALPH WALDO EMERSON

So much has been written about the turbulent times in which we live, that it may be presumptuous to present another study of the half-century that is bounded by the assassination of William McKinley and the "decline and fall" of Harry S. Truman. This seems to be an age of personalized history. Some U. S. Presidents have even sought to ensure immortality by founding museums and libraries to contain the record of their individual exploits.

But the present writer is bold enough to go forward with something entirely different. He is interested in finding how the forward sweep of the past half-century has been related to the achievements of several hundred men whose one common bond is membership in the Princeton Class of 1903, Old Nassau's "50-Year Class" in the spring of 1953.

This will not be a university-class history in the traditional sense, with statistics of marriages, of median income, geographical distribution and so on. It will not be a "group biography." No proper evaluation of Princeton 1903, one of the remarkable classes in the University's annals, can be presented in such restrictive, unrelated terms.

Instead, we must turn the clock back to Commencement Day in June, 1903, when Woodrow Wilson hailed the first class to be graduated under his presidency. Henry Ford was just then organizing his Motor Company. Theodore Roosevelt was about to recognize the Republic of Panama. Orville Wright had risen 120 feet above the earth in a flying-machine. The first daring motorists to cross the continent were chugging up the Rockies. And there was trouble in the Balkans.

Woodrow's First Born were "in" on the ground floor. In the years ahead the world they had known as undergraduates was to change faster and more completely than at any other time in its history. At every turn would be members of this famous class, each doing his part, some in a big way, some less spectacularly, all contributing to the metamorphosis. In government, business, art, science, the professions and in war, 1903 would be found playing significant roles in this kaleidoscopic pageant of day by day affairs.

That is the thesis of this "1903 approach to history." In examining the impact of this group of men on the times through which they have lived and are living, it is not possible to evaluate separately the work of every one of the 329 men who made up the Class. Nor is it necessary. The details of their individual lives are set forth elsewhere in this volume. The writer has contented himself with a sampling, a brief summary of the exploits of a few typical members of 1903 in their various fields of activity. So he has started with some of the 35 men whose careers have been chronicled in that most standard of standard reference works, WHO'S WHO. But there are many others who will appear as the picture is developed.

The breath-taking transition from the early 1900's to Wendell Wilkie's "One World" is well symbolized by the accomplishments of two of these men, Harvey Rentschler and Sam Higginbottom. Harvey, pioneering in the field of radiant energy, especially as applied to bacteriology, in which he held more than 100 patents, fathered also the uranium-production process, upping the laboratory output of uranium from a few grams to 500 pounds per day, accelerating the production of the A-Bomb. Sam Higginbottom, close friend as well as critic of Mahatma Gandhi, Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the United States in 1939, pioneered in raising living standards for India's teeming millions, establishing the Allahabad Agricultural College from which have stemmed the projects now implemented in India by Point Four and the Ford Foundation.

Between these boundary marks of science and humanitarianism are grouped public officials, educators, corporation executives and business men, lawyers, engineers and representatives of the 100 - plus occupations found within the Class.

In world affairs the name of Breck Long will long be remembered. Trained as an attorney, he was U. S. Ambassador to Italy and to Latin-American nations before he rose to be Assistant Secretary of State and culminated his career as a Delegate to the Dumbarton Oaks Conference and as a member of the group that formulated the U. S. proposal for the United Nations.

Dave Baird, for years a power in New Jersey politics and the Republican Party's gubernatorial nominee in 1931, served in the United States Senate as successor to Walter Edge. Gil Close, before entering the steel industry, had been confidential secretary to President Woodrow Wilson during the Paris Peace Conference and had written the draft of Wilson's Fourteen Points. Henry Kays, lawyer, New Jersey Freeholder, Assemblyman and State Senator became Vice Chancellor of New Jersey in 1935 and held that high office until retirement in 1949.

Many towns have had 1903 Mayors; a partial listing of "municipal fathers" would include Karl Frederick, better known as the world's individual

Olympic Pistol Champion and more recently a ranking Olympic official; Stuart Hamill, attorney and a member of the Maryland State Board of Education; Ben Herr, Advisory Master in Chancery from 1933 until 1945, New Jersey's top authority on marriage and divorce law; Norm Parke, industrialist; and yodler "Tiddle" Tillinghast.

On the federal level of government the numerals '0-3 flash on and off with the regularity of an illuminated Times Square sign. A number of men were tapped for special, short-time missions; others were repeatedly summoned, or were asked to assume long-range assignments.

Metals expert "Dutch" Vogelsang, former President of the National Metals Exchange, retired in 1950 only to be called back immediately to solve metal crises growing out of the Korean War. He had previously been a War Production Board Divisional Director and a Section Chief in the Department of Commerce Office of Material Distribution. Bill Blakeman offered his services to the U. S. Maritime Commission at the outbreak of World War II and finally retired in 1949. He had been a ship-builder and had also served as Director of the Budget for the State of Maryland. The 19-billion dollar shipbuilding program of the Maritime Commission was presided over, on the financial side, by Earle Anderson who served the Commission as Director of Finance from 1938 to 1946. Earlier, he had drawn up the original "General Specifications for Building Ships of the U. S. Navy" and had invented the famous "cage mast." Naval architect, financial executive and author, he had been for a decade a "man behind the screen" as an officer of the A. T. & T. subsidiary that introduced and helped to develop sound motion pictures.

During World War II "Potty" Jenvey, an expert on heavy machinery, was first with the Construction Machinery Division of the War Production Board and then with the War Assets Administration. "Chappie" Barron, Chief Metallurgical Engineer of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Company, upon retirement became associated with Overseas Consultants, a group organized to assist in analyzing industrial conditions in Occupied Areas, and did important work in the re-generation of Japan. Paul Welling, retired Chicago investment banker, served the Defense Plant Corporation during World War II as Regional Consultant.

There is no way of telling how many '03'ers read Dr. Samuel Johnson's works as undergraduates, but certainly a sizable proportion took to heart a Johnsonian adage: "The law is the last result of human wisdom acting upon human experience for the benefit of the public." A recapitulation of the accomplishments of 1903's lawyers, some of whom have already been mentioned and others of whom will be singled out in paragraphs to follow, would alone constitute strong proof of the author's contention that 1903's role has been a unique one.

Howard Ameli, perennial President of the Big Brother Movement in Brooklyn, was a Special Assistant to the U. S. Attorney General for some five years and in World War II rendered distinguished service as Special Counsel for the U. S. Maritime Commission and then for the Interstate Commerce Commission. Another native of Brooklyn, Henry Turner, still the active partner in a New York law firm, is a former President of the New York City Board of Education as well as a retired Chairman of the New York State Commission Against Discrimination in Employment.

If one were trying to establish "natural laws" governing legal training and the profession itself, three broad generalities would present themselves: (1) a legal degree is an "Open Sesame" in any number of fields; (2) versatility and a multiplicity of interests are hallmarks of the profession; and (3) confirmed lawyers will practice in the geographical areas in which their roots have been planted before they entered law school.

Charlie Dugro, the first Princeton undergraduate ever to own and operate an automobile and a Montana judge at age 31, resigned his judgeship to operate family properties in New York. In Baltimore Charlie Reeves rose to the presidency of the Maryland Motor Car Insurance Company before founding his own general insurance company in 1932. A brilliant trial lawyer, Jim Miller leapfrogged from Pittsburgh to New York to enter a securities firm and later the insurance business. Shirley Carr, editor of 1903's Twenty-Year Record and biographer of the French hero, Bertrand du Guesclin, abandoned his New York practice for advertising in 1919 and in the 1940's was admitted to the New Hampshire and Massachusetts Bars.

"Colonel" Byles practiced law in Titusville, Pa., for a few years, then became in turn General Counsel, Director, Vice President and President of the Tide Water Oil Company, later devoting his remarkable talents to the stabilizing of the oil industry as President of the American Petroleum Institute. Court Nicoll, twice elected to both the New York Board of Aldermen and the New York State Senate, was President of the Museum of the City of New York. The music of Princeton Past and Present was linked by Otto Hack, noted as a singer and a founder of the famed N. Y. University Glee Club, whose law firm represented the Gould Estate. In Chicago Cy Adams, a graduate of the Northwestern Law School, also provided leadership in musical circles, becoming Vice-President of the Chicago Orchestral Association.

In New Jersey a number of native sons are numbered among the State's eminent attorneys: Dave Bingham, Corwin Howell (Class Valedictorian), "Doc" Moore, Ivy Orator Curl Pierson, "Jimmie" Dear, Otto Seggel, Gus Roche. All became conspicuous in civic and state affairs, with Moore teaching for 15 years at the John Marshall College of Law in Jersey City and also serving as an Advisory Master of the New Jersey Court of Chancery.

Ward Chamberlin, for five years 1903's Class Agent, only interrupted his New York City law practice long enough to compile an almost incredible record on World War I battlefields. Bill Barr, Class representative on the Graduate Council for two decades, and Bill Bauerdorf, remain on the go in their New York firms, while Howard Armstrong, attached to the War Trade Board in the first war, retired in 1946, and Ben Messler, specializing in estate work, served the Class for the eight years prior to his death, as Secretary and Class President.

In Norristown, Pa., "Skinner" Wright, a Class Trustee, directs the firm of Wright, Mauch, Hawes & Forest; in St. Louis, Mo., Tom McPheeters, former Secretary of the Bar Association of St. Louis, is senior partner of his firm; and in Illinois Martin Decker held office for many years as Probate Judge of Lake County, his son succeeding him. In Philadelphia, Gar Scott, father of two Princeton lettermen, has been General Counsel of the United Gas Improvement Company since 1922.

Foreign Missions have been a special field for the activities of 1903. Six weeks before the Class assembled for its sixth reunion, Miner Rogers, who had volunteered for a mission assignment in Asiatic Turkey, was shot down by rioters while going to the rescue of an aged Turkish woman in the town of Adana; a bronze tablet in the Princeton University Chapel memorilaizes his heroic career. George Scott, a delegate to the 1939 International Missionary Conference in Madras, India, started out in the Near East and later became Secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions. The 1903 President of the Philadelphian Society, John Steen, completed a missionary "apprenticeship" in Japan, and following ordination held parishes in Greater New York for 35 years.

"Gov" Odell, an architect of Presbyterian mission policy in the Western Hemisphere and a candidate for the title "The Best Known North American in the Caribbean Area," stepped down in 1949 after 43 years of continuous service — 18 in Cuba and Puerto Rico and a quarter-century as Secretary for the West Indies for the Presbyterian Church. Sam Higginbottom's great career in India has already been noted.

Nearer home, Morgan Ashley, one of the oldest Chaplains on active duty with the Armed Forces in World War II and formerly Episcopal Student Chaplain at the University of Florida, is Rector of the Church of the Holy Comforter in Crescent City, Florida, while "Danny" Daniel, now in his 45th successive year in pastoral work, is minister of the First Presbyterian Church of Richmond Hill, N. Y.

The customary "ministerial process," calling for seminary training immediately after graduation, was disregarded by Charlie Imbrie and Jimmie Johnson, who won their spurs in other fields before deciding upon the ministry. Charlie had eleven years of business experience behind him when he entered upon his theological studies. Jimmie Johnson, Reporter of the Supreme Court of Arkansas from 1913 until 1917, gave up law in 1920, served as Moderator of the Presbyterian Synods of Tennessee and Florida, and for many years before retiring pastored a church in Miami and helped establish several other churches in that city.

John Acheson, minister, chemist and musician, provides a most convincing link between "things of the spirit" and the "age of engineering science." In 1916 Acheson was pastor of a large Detroit church; three years later, after he had taken a degree in chemistry, he was instructor in metallurgy and steel-making with the Carnegie Steel Company. He "retired" seven years ago to lecture on Inorganic Chemistry in the University of Pittsburgh and to serve a small Presbyterian congregation near Pittsburgh.

Because of his innate modesty, few have grasped the significance of "Liz" Field's achievements as an electrical engineer. With more than 40 patents to his credit, Field in World War I was engaged in deep-sea submarine detection and in the last war contributed to the successful use of radar and associated equipment. He was responsible for the development of the telephonic system of train dispatching, now standard on the world's principal railroads, and also did the basic work for the safety devices used in making modern bank vaults burglar-proof.

The coke-making industry has long been indebted to Jay Slee, possibly the world's number one authority on by-product coke oven operation. He was one of the builders and later Superintendent of the Tata Iron and Steel Works at Jamshepur, India, now the largest steel producing plant in the British Empire.

The "new frontiers" opened up by engineering were skillfully explored by a cross-section of 1903. "Brute" Hodgman had his troubles passing hydraulics in senior year, but ironically enough that did not prevent him from becoming one of America's outstanding water-works engineers. "Ajax" Speer, for some years Executive Director of the Council-Manager Government of St. Petersburg, Florida, concentrated on public utilities and was a factor in the development of electric power in the Southeastern States. Alex Martin, consultant to gold and copper mining companies, blazed trails in the asbestos industry. Another consulting mining engineer, Alf Lewis, worked closely with the Arizona Department of Mineral Resources. Still another, "Pat" Jess, superintended mining interests in Alaska, Canada and the United States and headed a coal and coke company in Minnesota as well as a West Virginia railway, while Frank Wallower presided for years over mining interests in Missouri, then took to cattle raising.

The Brothers McClave, Ross and Steve, in 1911 founded the engineering firm of McClave and McClave, which, among other achievements, has served a number of New Jersey municipalities as City Engineer. Ross was Bowdoin's football coach in 1907-1909 and did his work so impressively that later he was given an honorary degree. He departed also from engineering long enough to serve as Speaker of the House in the New Jersey General Assembly. On the West Coast "Mac" McCurdy gained recognition as a consulting engineer and engineering executive, and in Missouri the directors of the Wabash Railway Company named the bridge over the Missouri River at St. Charles the "Pitcairn Bridge" as a memorial to Norm Pitcairn, who had saved the road out of bankruptcy and had served it as President and Board Chairman.

The reunion of architecture and engineering has been the life-long concern of Charlie Higgins, New York City architect and an organizer of the Princeton Engineering Association, and of Art Meigs, recipient of the annual awards of both the Architectural League of New York and the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. Charlie's structures include the research laboratories and other buildings of the International Business Machines Company, and Art is represented, architecturally, on the Princeton, Bryn Mawr and Haverford campuses.

When the country was brought face to face with the problem of conserving natural resources, Jim Eddy undertook to increase and improve the nation's timber wealth by creating new and better varieties of trees. He adapted the methods of Burbank to this end and established and endowed the Institute of Forest Genetics at Placerville, Cal., turning it over later to the U. S. Forest Service. In Maryland, meanwhile, Gus Ober, director of banks and corporations in his native state, was serving as a member of the National Soil Improvement Committee and as President of the National Fertilizer Association.

"The most responsible, least advertised, the worst paid and the most richly rewarded profession in the world" — education — proved irresistible for an impressively large 1903 constituency. Near the head of any roster of modern American educators belongs Charlie Beury, President Emeritus of Temple University, who performed educational, financial and administrative miracles in making Temple one of the country's leading centers of higher education. Two "longevity marks" in New Jersey's public education system were made by 1903 teachers; in 1948 "Chick" Hewitt concluded 43 years of teaching in the English Department of the New Jersey Teachers' College, and in 1947 "Holly" Hollenbach wound up 40 years tenure in Jersey City schools during which he had never been debited with a single day's absence. "Bunny" Reed, trained as a minister and noted for his work in behalf of the blind, in 1935 was named President of St. Petersburg Junior College, the first accredited institution of its kind in Florida.

Thad Riker, editor of the American Historical Review and of the Journal of Modern History, and one of the handful of American historians honored by Oxford University, held a scholarly position second to none in the Southwest, where he was Professor of Modern European History at the University of Texas from 1910 until 1951. An authority of Old English Verse and a poet in his own right, Charlie Kennedy, in whose honor an endowed book fund has been established in the Princeton Library, took time out to give four years to the presidency of the National Collegiate Athletic Association; he has been termed the "most gifted translator of Anglo-Saxon poetry who ever practiced that difficult art."

Carl Shafer of tennis fame ventured into a new sphere of education, bringing into being Camp Susquehannock, camp for boys at Brackney, Pa. Charlie Caldwell was among Carl's athletic instructors. Bill Scranton, more recently associated with the Pennsylvania Highway Department, directed for some years the Drafting Department in the Scranton, Pa., School District, and "Dad" Wilcox, the first member of 1903 to join the ranks of Octogenarians, after years of practice as a civil engineer, taught engineering at Des Moins University and later at Iowa State College.

In California and Massachusetts 1903 was responsible for the evolution of influential centers of music. Bill Mixsell, eminent pediatrician as well as a Colleague of the American Guild of Organists, opened his Pasadena home for organ recitals and engineered the organization of the Los Angeles Symphony Association and the Bach Society in Pasadena. Music-lovers also migrated to the South Hadley residence of "Spike" Warbeke, composer and organist, who for over thirty years as Professor of Philosophy and Psychology was a Mount Holyoke College tradition and a driving force in raising teaching standards in the Humanities.

The cultural life of Buffalo, N. Y. was enriched by Alex Galt, manufacturer and investment counsel until he entered the Buffalo Public Library in 1927 and ultimately completed 18 years as that city's Chief Librarian. And in Shrewsbury, N. J., Harold Nevius, active in the real estate and investment securities field, not only presided over the Board of Education but also devoted a quarter-century to the direction of the Presbyterian Sunday School and meanwhile delved into the colonial history of Shewsbury's historic church.

As year tumbled into year, the distinctive genius of the American people — its capacity for doing anything better and more thoroughly than it has ever been done before — was strikingly evident in the related spheres of industry, business, transportation and finance. The foundations of the national economy, the bulwark of democracy in the two most enervating wars in world history and Western Civilization's main source of strength in its struggle for survival, were cemented into place in the early 1900's. And once again the significance of 1903's role cannot be minimized. A panoramic view of events and personalities should not be cluttered with a listing of impressive occupational classifications, but the author cannot shake off the temptation of sampling 1903's business-financial accomplishments.

It would run something like this: "Big Jim" Ames, manufacturer of iron and steel products in Jersey City, N. J.; Charlie Allison making ice machinery in Canada; Len Beale, President of the Pennsylvania Salt Company; Horace Saks, esteemed as one of New York's outstanding merchants, founder of "Saks Fifth Avenue"; Bill Roys, President of the General Casualty Company of Wisconsin; Norm Donald, senior partner of a New York banking house; John Burnham, Chicago banker, now retired; Bob Rice, Minneapolis resident partner of another New York banking firm; Harold Greene running a Dude Ranch in Arizona.

In case the reader is not yet convinced, the cataloguing could be prolonged ad infinitum: "Scrappy" Strater, executive of three major Kentucky businesses; "Andy" Freeman, New York investment banker and former Vice President of the Chase Securities Company; "Pat" Cassidy, associated throughout his active career with the Mellon interests and, by the way, the Class's only licensed Mississippi River pilot; "Rastus" Wells, banker and Chairman of the Board of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce; Al Schultz, lawyer and insurance executive; John Clancy, President of the Southeastern Paper Company; "Pop" Little, leader in the development of ethical advertising principles and methods; Chillie Childress, partner in a leading New York Stock Exchange firm.

The number of names on the "Roberts Bowl" — now 19 — almost matches the number of institutions and organizations with which the bowl's illustrious founder, Ike Roberts, has been affiliated. President from 1941 to 1949 of the Philadelphia Savings Fund Society, the oldest mutual savings bank in the country, Roberts in 1944 was elected President of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks. Douglas Gorman, father of five World War II veterans, president of two companies and director of a dozen or more business and philanthropic activities, was to Baltimore what Roberts has been to Philadelphia. Bill Porter started life as circulation manager of the Wilmington Evening Journal, then turned to transportation, retiring from the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1929, and Bill Coulter, late in life, swapped the presidency of the Greensburg Coal and Coke Company for the presidency of Western Air Express Company which under his management became the Western Air Lines and took its place among the country's leading air transportation companies.

A LaFontaine dictum — "Diversity, that is my motto" — most certainly applies. Dan Horton and Fred Betz both operated large eastern brewing companies. "Pootch" Prewitt, in St. Louis, abandoned engineering for insurance, and in California Jack O'Neill swung from mining to real estate and then to insurance brokerage. Tom Plunkett, a lifelong resident of Massachusetts, divided the post-Princeton years between the manufacture of woolens and the Pittsfield Coal Gas Company. Cliff Babson used his industrial experience as a springboard for establishing an independent firm of sales and business consultants, and out of "Cupid" Holt's experience as a retail diamond merchant came several monographs on precious stones.

Three men in as many lines of endeavor sandwiched educational interests into their daily routines. "Pop" Long, founder and president of a leading

Kansas City construction firm, is a former Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Park College, Missouri, while Charlie Wood, manufacturer of power transmission machinery, is a retired Regent of Mercersburg Academy. Then there is "Wrink" Grannis, prominent Chicago investment counsel, who in World War II taught navigation in the Great Lakes Cruising Club Navigation School and graduated some 1000 navigators.

No picture of 1903, however sketchy, could be a faithful reproduction without at least a brief mention of agriculture and related pursuits. A few miles from Princeton, in Allentown, N. J., "Boze" Wright has engaged in large-scale farming ever since he received his A.B. Steve Templeton farmed all his graduate life in Illinois, and Jack Perry, rifle demonstrator and mechanical expert in World War I, combined farming with real estate, after a few years of engineering. In 1940 Fred Bayles retired from the New York Telephone Company to specialize in the breeding of Aberdeen-Angus cattle near Hackettstown, N. J., and Dave Baird combined diary farming with insurance and politics in and near Camden.

In Florida, "Bun" Wilson, honorary President for life of the National Association of Market Managers, gave that state's economic life a series of injections, revolutionizing commercial farming by organizing a system of Farmers' Markets, introducing the paper-making industry and directing sound promotional undertakings.

Canadian-born Tommy Rutherford, eminent psychiatrist, gave 32 years of his life to the Hillside Hospital for Mental Diseases at Clark's Summit, Pa., and served from 1941 to 1949 as Superintendent of Pennsylvania's Fairview Hospital for the Criminal Insane. When he retired the Pennsylvania Legislature passed a special resolution of appreciation. Phil Lantz took up hospital management as a profession after early years as a financial executive and business man, and made history as Superintendent of the Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh. Harry Decker, author of numerous medical papers and a former teacher at the University of Pittsburgh practices surgery and medicine in the Iron City, and "Stew" Lawrance, D.S.C. winner has been a practicing physician in Reading, Pa., for the past 18 years.

"Gweel" Guile, whose many professional titles have included Lecturer and Clinical Professor in Medicine in New York University, retired only recently from active practice, while "Eck" Eckardt, ear-nose-and-throat specialist continues active in Brooklyn. A year ago Cad Keeney gave up his extensive practice in Summit, N. J. Bill Janeway, during his lifetime, was Chief of Staff of the Staten Island Hospital, N. Y., and also a bacteriologist for the U. S. Public Health Service.

The responsibility of recording the passing scene, of interpreting the relationship of one event to the next, was the burden of Ned Scudder, Editor, Publisher and President of the Newark Evening News, which under his administration has become one of the great, conscientious newspapers of our times. In recent years Scudder, a Class Trustee since 1903's incorporation, branched into other media and established Radio Station WNJR. Fred Fairbanks, son of a United States Vice President, "migrated" to California but returned to Indiana to serve as President and Publisher of the widely read Indianapolis News from 1923 until 1940. Commencement orator Henry Goddard Leach, President Emeritus of the American Scandinavian Foundation and gifted interpreter of Scandinavian civilization and culture, edited the American-Scandinavian Review for a whole decade and was Editor, besides, of The Forum and The Century.

Two of America's great publishing houses have been headed by men of 1903. Bob McNamara, who in early life had founded the Princeton Store, climbed step by step to the Presidency of Scott, Foresman and Company, one of the country's largest publishers of educational books. He had served also as director of the Chicago Crime Commission. Whitney Darrow, meanwhile, had become Executive Vice President of Scribners. He had started in the publishing field by founding the Princeton University Press, and as Princeton reached its 200th year he conceived and helped to carry through the Bicentennial Celebration that did more to enhance the University's reputation and standing than any event since Wilson's inauguration.

The heart-pounding "soap operas" and "who-dun-its" of radio and television were anticipated by Arthur Reeve, creator of Craig Kennedy, super-scientific detective, and a collaborator in the seemingly endless motion picture series, "Exploits of Elaine." The brilliant and versatile Pax Hibben, diplomat, war correspondent and militant Progressive, was decorated by Russia, Greece and Japan, managed to have his name inscribed on Lenin's tomb, and authored a biography of Henry Ward Beecher that was characterized by Sinclair Lewis in 1942 as a book a "little ahead of its time." Elmer (Mabel) Mason glittered as a writer of short stories and Ted Knox earned renown as New Jersey's foremost landscape artist, while Charlie Wrenn was making a name for himself in portrait painting.

Four members of 1903 served as Trustees of the University, three of them Charter Trustees, a record equalled by no other class. Al Smith, beloved Clerk of the Trustees and for many years the sympathetic and tactful manager of the 1903 Fund, was one of the organizers of the Princeton University Fund, the institution's life line in the uncertain present. Percy Pyne, banker and director of many corporations, followed in the footsteps of his revered father, Princeton's Moses Taylor Pyne. Pedlar Palmer, President and Chairman of the Board of the New Jersey Zinc Company, gave to Princeton the Palmer Stadium, and a quarter-century later, with the phoenix-like rise of Palmer Square, translated into fact the hope for a reconstructed colonial center for historic Prince Town. Breck Long, diplomat and statesman, the fourth of the 1903 Trustees, was elected to the Board by the Alumni.

Pedlar Palmer was an enthusiastic yachtsman. So was and is Frazer Harris, lawyer, architect and farmer, who now lives afloat twelve months out of the year.

The story of 1903 in World War I has been told at length in the Twenty Year Record. Four members of the Class were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross; many others were cited, some decorated by foreign powers. And the spirit of '03, symbolized on the battlefields of World War II by the Alexander Stobo Memorial Ambulance, gift of the Class to the American Field Service, that served men of the Allied Nations, will be perpetuated at Princeton by the W. Sanderson Detwiler 1903 Prize, established by Sandy's sister in 1949 and awarded each spring to that member of the graduating class who in the judgment of his classmates has done most for his class. Some of life's deeper meanings will be memorialized by the John Martyn Warbeke 1903 Prize in Esthetics, established by Spike's widow in his memory and in commemoration of the 50th Reunion Year of the Class.

Seldom has a university — Princeton — had more reason to be grateful to a few — the Class of 1903. This "Class of Destiny" bridged the gap between Wilson's still reverberating slogan "Princeton in the Nation's Service" and Harold W. Dodd's telling phrase "Education for Use."

The writer rests his case.

We Glimpse the Future

Carpe diem quam minimum credula postero

When, half a century ago, Cap Sellers undertook to write the Class Prophecy, for the full text of which the 1903 Nassau Herald should be consulted, he claimed to have queried Curley Pierson as to whether he knew anything about the science of augury.

"Augurs?" Curl said (according to Cap.) "All I know about augurs is that they are a terrible bore."

Perhaps it was the recollection of that very apt reply that led the aforesaid Curley, now our President, to invite each member of the Class to prophesy, in early November of 1952, as an effective way of putting all of us on the defensive when we should foregather some months later for our Fiftieth Reunion. Perhaps, if all augured well, we would not be bored.

No limit was placed on the scope of our predictions, nor was there even a suggestion as to what period should be covered, and the resulting prophecies range all the way from the moon to the cow barn and from November fourth, 1952 to the same month in the year 2000.

Charlie Reeves, taking the uncertainties of the future by the forelock, leads off with this:

> My prediction — That 1903 friendships will endure to the last and become even dearer as the shadows fall along the way of a great Class.

But Tom McPheeters seems to doubt the sanity of some, at least, of our prophetic experts. He says:

> Dear Curley — You are asking for a short prophecy of things to come, but not having as yet been certified as of unsound mind, I must refrain. I still have a nostalgic yearning for the good old horse and buggy days held up to scorn by those mighty intellects, Roosevelt and Truman.

Dave Bingham takes a very serious view of the future. Just read what one of our Class Pessimists has to say:

> My prophecy is that very soon will come the "End of the Age," not the end of the world. Things are happening that are so awful — murders, corruption in government, etc. — that I can hardly imagine that the Almighty will allow us much longer to live the way we are. If I happen to be around at that time, I would like to meet the "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and battle with them as David did with Goliath.

When our David battles with the four-horsed Goliath, we will all be rooting for him, yet Bob Rice thinks that even the "End of the Age" may not be without its compensations. He writes:

Minneapolis, Nov. 4, 1952

I lack talent for even jingles, but I enjoyed trying to compose one as silly as perhaps anyone else will—

After we have all departed
A new era will be started
Of a populous without legs*
Not born, but hatched from eggs.

Nov. 5 — Please refer to my letter of the 4th instant. The word "populous" is in error and should be "populace."*

Rem Eckardt, meanwhile, takes an optimistic view of things, and Rem, who looks into people's heads and down their throats, should know a lot about what goes on inside. This is his prognosis:

The coming generation will have an increased life expectancy. The above is my prophecy.

That is direct and to the point. But half a dozen or so of our prophets write either just before or just after the day of the Presidential election, an event that evidently had a great influence on their ideas of what the future held in store. Thus 'Rastus Wells:

Tomorrow will be election day. The socialistic trend initiated in 1932 has moved forward at a rapid and ever increasing pace during the last seven years. Eisenhower would check this and get us back toward the philosophy of our founders which had led us to be the greatest country on Earth. Existing flagrant errors in judgment coupled with scandals in high and low places should affect the chances of success for the party in power.

The election seems to have made quite an impression on Chick Hewitt, but his mind wanders into the scientific field under the influence of Hollywood and his experience as a motion picture theater manager. Says Chick:

Eisenhower will be President for the next eight years, and world and national conditions will gradually improve. Television in natural color in general use in five to ten years. Improved programs.

Harold Nevius, however, being still in doubt about the political outcome and perhaps a bit hazy as to matters not closely related to politics, makes a four-fold prediction:

> (1) If Stevenson is elected and the Republican Party becomes extinct, our country will be under totalitarian control by 1960.
> (2) If Eisenhower is elected, John Foster Dulles will become Secretary of State.
> (3) A United States of Europe will be put together within the next ten years.
> (4) Telepathy (transfer of thought) will be scientifically explained and USED by 2000 A.D.

Cy Adams disclaims any detailed knowledge about the aftermath of the election, but what he has to say is reassuring.

> I am no prophet, but I don't think the country will be quite as badly off as both parties lead us to believe if the other party candidate is elected.

Bob McNamara waited until November 5th, the day after the election, to make his prophecy, yet withal remains a bit cautious:

> What will happen in the next ten years is a question that would require a gift of prophecy which I do not possess. As for the next four years TODAY (note the date) seems to offer promise of a trend in the right direction for the U.S.A., perhaps the entire world.

On November 6th, when just about all the returns were in, Walter Boswell ventured his prediction, although still not quite sure of the solidarity of the Grand Ole Party. Says Walter:

> Not that reactionary Republicans will subscribe to this — I predict: November 4th, 1952 will be a Memorable Day for democracy, a reaffirmation of their belief in integrity, honesty and high principles in government by the preponderance of independent Americans, and many of their votes were not against Stevenson but against Harry Trumanism.

Ike Roberts is numbered among our optimists. From "that good old Quaker town" where for so many years he presided over America's oldest savings institution, he exhorts:

> Do not sell our country short. Material and scientific progress lie ahead. In the latter field the surface has only been scratched. Electronics coming to the fore. Travel by air will largely replace that by land. Individuals no more able than at present. Curley Pierson and other leading lights of 1903 will neither be surpassed nor equaled.

Ike is joined by his fellow-townsman, Gar Scott, who, in his Prophecy of Things to Come, thinks that

A party formed by a coalition of southern Democrats and conservatire Republicans will successfully oppose a party organized by labor unions and other radical elements.

Ward Chamberlin takes high rank among the optimists of the Class. With the good of the University always in sight, he predicts

That the Joseph Henry house will once again be on the move. Then and only then will the full beauty of the front campus be restored and Nassau Hall again appear in all her historic grandeur.

There are still a few more of the Class who look far into the political future. Norm Parke is one of them, but he carefully safeguards his prognostication with an IF, and then draws what seems like an inevitable conclusion:

I'm no prophet, but "This I Know" after 49 years of married life, if our progeny elect a woman President, she will continue to create the issue.

Charlie Beury seems to have been influenced a bit by his wife and, like Norm Parke, to have the Woman-for-President idea, mixed with the Spaceman (or Space-woman) conception, perhaps a necessary combination. Here is his prophecy:

First visit from earth to moon May, 1960
Princeton will become co-ed November, 2000
First woman President November, 2000
But—if Princeton goes co-ed, neither football nor reunions will be abolished.

Without mentioning such a detail as a trip to the moon, Bill Scranton figures as our most far-sighted scientific prophet. He too waited until the election excitement had subsided to give voice to his Prophesy — The next 50 years will find many advances in science and mechanics, continuing the progress of the past half century. The frailties and virtues of human nature will exist much the same, by whatever name they are called. While we know that bull is not always beef, let us remember the salad days of our youth, and that the joy of our present living is happily seasoned with a bit of what is sage.

George Wilcox, who was planning a lunar voyage, seems to have given up that idea, for the present at least. Says he:

By the year 1980 our own scientists will have explored the moon so thoroughly by use of presently developed equipment that a visit will not be necessary.

Fred Remick must have been studying the exploits of the Spacemen on his television set, for he comes forward with this:

Some day an inventive genius will discover an alloy or other device capable of deflecting gravity waves, as light, heat, sound, and electrical and other waves are now deflected. This will greatly reduce the force of gravity, and in 1995 Charlie Allison's great-great-grandson will don a suit of this material and lightly hop over the ground with Herculean strides 125 feet long.

Meanwhile Steve McClave, foreseeing a rush for seats on the space ships, at least during the tourist season, has taken no chances of a possible disappointment. Says our far-sighted sage from Cliffside:

I introduced my grandson Stephen Hesse to Prof. Lyman Spitzer, who accepted Stephen's application to fly with him on the first space ship to Mars.

Steve is not one of those to limit the travels of the next generation to the near-by moon. But Dougal Herr thinks there are limits to the expansion of our scientific age. Here is his prophecy:

I predict that the electronic brain will never be permitted to be developed to the extent of eliminating the jobs of the politicians or the functions of women.

Of course our ex-Master-in-Chancery should know. But Dave Baird, who for so many years managed all the politicians of South Jersey, thinks now only in terms of cows. Dave gives us his Prophecy — If the Dairy Farmers are ever organized by the Unions, milk will cost the consumer 60 to 75 cents per quart.

We turn now from Davey Baird's cows to Stalin and the Communists, who loom large in the vision of some of our prophets. Phil Lantz, for example, predicts

Within ten years we — all who are left of us and those following — will be working as slaves for Joe Stalin or his successor.

And Sam Higginbottom's thought runs along somewhat similar lines, despite his well known optimism. Sam thinks it is high time we realized that we have been fighting World War III ever since Korea, while we let the Russians call the tune, proving to them, meanwhile, by our acts, that we are afraid of them and will not assert ourselves. So he predicts that :

Either we stop Russia, or make up our minds to be enslaved by her. The longer we delay, the more chance she has to build up her satellites, and the greater the price we will have to pay. She is now getting control of vital commodities of which we are short.

Meanwhile Harry Decker has been availing himself of some kind of a crystal ball that he says he has, and which he must keep in hiding out in Pittsburg. This spherical possession of his has the unique faculty of producing a spectrum, which we had thought to be the function of the prism. Anyhow, this is what he says:

> From the Crystal Ball Spectrum of one H. R. Decker, M.D. Before our 70th Reunion, which ten of our Class will attend, we shall have fought a war with Russia and defeated and ousted their politburo government.

That is both disturbing and reassuring, including the ten men who will reune in 1973, but Art Meigs takes a still more gloomy view of what the Scientific and Mechanical Age will produce. He sends in his > Prophecy — That Civilization will have descended into Barbarism, through advances in Science and Machinery, by the year Two Thousand A.D.

The "A.D." part is what gives confidence in Art's prediction. George Scott, though, discards the scientific approach. He seems to think that peace is some kind of a south-paw. We're not going to the moon, thinks George, but instead will enter those Elysian fields 'way off to the left, where what is mine is thine. He prophesies that > America will continue gradually into fuller socialism. Russia will become less belligerent. Non-Caucasions may eventually control the world. No journey to the moon by HOMO SAPIENS.

Ellis Pierson, who, in an ill moment started all this prophecy business, does not hesitate himself to assume the role of a prognosticator, and even ventures to look farther into the future than any of his victims, by at least three years. Fortunately, he takes issue with George Scott. This is Curley's prediction:

> By 2003 our economic system of free enterprise, incentive and reward of efficiency will be on a sound basis through profit-sharing and stock ownership by employees, merging capital and labor as a team, rendering strikes DE TROP, unions archaic.

The year 2003, our Centennial, has a fascination for our Olympic Karl Frederick, too, although he had to enlist the aid of his daughter, who held his hand while he gazed into the crystal ball. Here is what he saw in the > Year 2003 — The Tiger beat the Bulldog again! They still call it football, but it is played by pushing buttons. Commons is no more; a pill does the business of a meal. Sophomores no longer dream of dates or life on this earth, but rather say: "I'll see you on the moon." I am truly glad to have known a more primitive sort of life.

Charlie Imbrie doesn't try to look quite so far ahead as does Curley Pierson or Karl Frederick, or even Harry Decker, his vision being limited to 1963. And he entirely neglects the moon, probably because of his nearby horizon. He makes this but he neglects to say what they will be kicking about. Earle Anderson does not hesitate to look away ahead (but only to 1978) and to say

> Prophecy — At our 60th Reunion in 1963 we shall have over 60 members yet alive and kicking

> I predict — That McSwishie Hamilton and at least three other members of the Class of 1903 will be present at our 75th reunion, and that at that time there will be 964 great-grandchildren of the Class, of whom 193 will be Princeton grads or undergrads.

Whitney Darrow, who managed our Twentieth Reunion, and who therefore may be considered an expert on such matters, has some ideas for our Seventy-Fifth, for which he is already making plans. Here is his preliminary announcement of attractions for that imminent event:

> Seventy-fifth: Ellis, Ward, Earle, Karl, lead parade, Kays dancing, Baird elephant costume, Betz Horton supporting each other, McNamara welcomes "lads," Darrow twenty-five words.

The last somewhat enigmatic phrase about the 25 words crept into Whitney's prophecy from habit, a throw-back to his editorial days, no doubt.

Hollie Hollenbach is another who projects his vision a quarter of a century hence, but is a bit more gloomy. He predicts that

> The sole survivor of 1903 at the 75th anniversary in 1978 will be Bill Coulter, then 99 years old, who will owe his longevity to his devotion to Princeton instead of a wife and children.

Danny Daniel, quite naturally, sees the future through the spectacles of the clergy. Give ear therefore unto a Daniel come to judgment:

> My prediction — As I see the approach of coming events, I feel that sometime, in the not too far distant future, all branches of the Christian church will be merged into one organic body.

Perhaps he has overlooked the anti-trust laws. Meanwhile Big Jim Ames, combining prayer and prophecy says this:

> Now that all the Old Testament prophecies are fulfilled, I believe that it will not be long before Christ's return, and the final Great Day of Judgment. My prayer is, "Give us faith in God and love for our fellow men, that we may have something to deposit on which the young people of today can draw interest tomorrow."

So not all of us think that the world is coming to an untimely end, and Jack O'Neill, quite in keeping with the prayer of Jim Ames, voices what most of us (that is to say, all of us who can qualify as patriarchs) will heartily echo:

> My prediction, and fond hope, is that at least one of my grandsons, maybe my namesake, will graduate from our Alma Mater.

And Skinner Wright sums it all up thus:

THERE WILL ALWAYS BE A PRINCETON.

Gifts and Bequests

Acceptissima semper munera sunt auctor
quae pretiosa facit.
Ovid; Heroides XVII.71

The Class of 1903 holds second place among all Alumni classes for the total of gifts and bequests to Princeton University made by members of the Class or credited to it as memorials. The grand total of approximately three and a quarter million dollars is exceeded only by the Class of 1888.

Included in the 1903 list of gifts and bequests are the following:

THE CLASS OF 1903 DORMITORY (1929). Designed by Charles Z. Klauder. Given by the Class of 1903. It contains rooms for 102 students and two members of the Faculty.

THE PALMER MEMORIAL STADIUM (1914). Designed by H. J. Hardenbergh. Given by Edgar Palmer, '03, in memory of his father, Stephen S. Palmer, Trustee of the University (1908-1913). The stadium seats over 50,000 people. It encloses a football field and a quarter-mile running track with 220-yard straightaway.

THE LONG FOUNDATION FOR ENGINEERING RESEARCH, established in 1943 by John Coleman Long '03 and his two sons, Robert W. Long '33 and Marshall C. Long '37, to aid Princeton through stimulating research in engineering, the income from the fund being made available to finance engineering research by members of the faculty of the School of Engineering, by graduate students in the School and by undergraduates.

JAMES E. HAYES ENGINEERING LABORATORY (1951), an addition to the main building, was erected with funds provided by a bequest of Edgar Palmer '03, and by gifts of alumni and friends of the School of Engineering and is named for Mr. Palmer's brother-in-law, James E. Hayes, C.E. '95, E.E. '97.

THE W. SANDERSON DETWILER 1903 PRIZE. Founded in 1949 in memory of W. Sanderson Detwiler, of the Class of 1903, by his sister, Mrs. William Jennings Price of Washington, D. C. The prize, a silver bowl, is awarded annually to that member of the senior class who, in the judgment of his classmates, has done most for his class.

The John Martyn Warbeke 1903 Prize in Esthetics. The annual interest on the sum of Two Thousand Dollars shall be awarded to that member of the Senior Class who has done the most distinguished work in the field of esthetics. The Prize was established by Mrs. Norah McC. Warbeke in memory of the late Professor John Martyn Warbeke, Class of 1903, on the occasion of the fiftieth reunion of his class. The award is made on the recommendation of the Philosophy Department but any Senior, whatever his department, is eligible for the Prize.

The John G. Armstrong Scholarships. Founded by a bequest from John G. Armstrong, of the Class of 1903, to endow eight equal scholarships, four for students from the State of Michigan and four for students from the State of Maryland. Under the terms of the bequest "general, mental, moral, and physical characteristics" are to be taken into consideration in awarding these scholarships, rather than "specialized excellence in any one field." Subject to the University regulations regarding scholarships, nominations are made by the governing bodies of the Princeton Alumni Association of Maryland and the Princeton Club of Michigan. If no suitable candidates from Maryland or Michigan apply, the scholarships may be awarded to candidates from other states who may be worthy.

The Hobart Amory Hare Baker Memorial Scholarship. Founded in 1924 by Percy R. Pyne, 2nd, Class of 1903, in memory of Captain Hobart Amory Hare Baker, of the Class of 1914, who died in line of duty in France, December 21, 1918.

The James Sprague Conrad Scholarship. Founded in 1945 by the bequest of Ida Sprague Conrad in memory of her husband, James S. Conrad of the Class of 1903.

The John Linn Patton Scholarship. Founded in 1903 by Mr. and Mrs. William A. Patton in memory of their son, John Linn Patton, of the Class of 1903, who died October 6, 1900.

The Olive Corning Pearson Scholarship. Founded in 1942 by Forrest G. Pearson of the Class of 1903. Open to residents of the City of Philadelphia.

The Albridge Clinton Smith Scholarship. Founded in 1952 by the family, friends and the Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges in memory of Albridge C. Smith, Jr., of the Class of 1903, who died June 4, 1951.

THE ALEXANDER STOBO MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP. Founded in 1933 by his sister, Mrs. Philip L. James, in memory of Alexander Stobo, of the Class of 1903. In awarding the scholarship preference is to be given to applicants who are sons of the members of the Class of 1903.

Eight carrels and a browsing alcove in the Firestone Library were provided by the forty-two thousand dollars credited to 1903 on account of that great project, and in addition the Library has received from members of the Class many important volumes, while the John Armstrong Fund of $13,000 was applied to the Civil War Collection, and an endowed book fund in the Princeton Library honors Charles W. Kennedy.

Among other special objects, contributions to which go toward making up the 1903 total are the Department of Religion, the Chapel, the Gordon S. Rentschler Professorship, the Legenre Scholarship, Student Aid, the Aeronautical Engineering Department, Henry Hall, Foulke Hall, the Woodrow Wilson School and the Infirmary, all of which benefited substantially from funds contributed by or on account of members of the Class, while unrestricted gifts and bequests so credited, not including "Annual Giving" have amounted to over $1,900,000.

In addition to gifts definitely credited to 1903, a substantial portion of the "Princeton Municipal Improvement," which includes the Palmer Square Development and the Nassau Tavern, was bequeathed to the University by Edgar Palmer.

Who's Who in America

μέγας ἐν τούτοις θεός, οὐδὲ γηράσκει

Thirty five members of the Class of 1903 are among the immortals whose self-written biographies have, from time to time, appeared in Who's Who. This is a little over fifteen percent of the 231 who received their bachelor's degree (A.B., B.S., or C.E.) in June 1903, a higher percentage, it is believed, than has been achieved by any other Princeton Class. The roster:

Ameli, Howard W.
Anderson, R. Earle
Baird, David, Jr.
Beale, Leonard T.
Beaury, Charles E.
Blair, James A., Jr.

John Leon Acheson

Born: October 28, 1881, at Shedds, Oregon
Occupation: Clergyman - Educator
Residence: 6640 Dalzell Place, Pittsburgh 17, Pa.
Married: December 24, 1919, Lenore Daisy Everhart, at Pittsburgh, Pa.

John entered Princeton in September 1902 from Albany College, Albany, Oregon, where in June of that year he received the degree of A.B. He received his Princeton A.B. degree in June 1903. Following graduation from Princeton he studied for the ministry at the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Allegheny, Pa., and began his pastoral work in 1906 at Port Huron, Michigan. From 1909 to 1912 he was Pastor of the Third United Presbyterian Church, Portland, Oregon; then, after extended travel in the Orient, became Pastor of the Military Avenue United Presbyterian Church of Detroit, Michigan, where he served until 1916. Following a course of study at the University of Pittsburgh where, in 1919, he received the degree of Bachelor of Chemistry, he became associated with the Carnegie Steel Company in Pittsburgh as Instructor in metallurgy and steel making. He retired from the Steel company in 1946, to lecture in the University of Pittsburgh on Inorganic Chemistry, and to serve as Pastor of a small congregation near Pittsburgh, the United Presbyterian Church of Indianola, Pa. He is a member of the American Chemical Society. A student of music all his life, he devised, and in 1936 published, a system of notation which he called the "Douzare" system, with a staff of six lines and six spaces, intended for research work in music, rather than as a substitute for the conventional system.

Robert Earle Anderson

Born: February 18, 1881, at Trenton, N. J.
Occupation: Financial Executive — Retired
Residence: 11 Sussex Avenue, Chatham, N. J.
Married: June 6, 1906, Elily Hayes Farr, at Lawrenceville, N. J.
d. January 7, 1946

Earle prepared for Princeton at the State Model School, Trenton, N. J., entering with the Class in September 1899 and receiving his C.E. degree magna cum laude in June, 1903. He was a member of Clio Hall, the Engineering Society, the University Glee Club and the Triangle Club Chorus, and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After graduation he studied naval architecture at the University of Glasgow, Scotland, and for nine years was in the employ of the Navy Department, at first in the New York Navy Yard and then in the Bureau of Construction and Repair in Washington where he had charge of specifications for naval vessels and wrote the original "General Specifications for Building Ships of the U. S. Navy." He was the inventor of the cage mast, used for many years on American battleships, the geometric form of which came from the model of the hyperboloid of revolution in the Princeton Graphics Department. In 1913 he was made Assistant to the Managing Director of the Lake Torpedo Boat Company, Bridgeport, Conn., and in 1914 became General Manager of the Augusta Savannah Navigation Company of Augusta, Ga. The following year he went with the Winchester Repeating Arms Company, New Haven, Conn., and in 1919 became its Treasurer, serving also as an officer or director of various associated companies, including Barney & Berry, Inc., the Simmons Hardware Company and the Winchester-Simmons Company. In 1924 he resigned from the Winchester Company and became Comptroller and later Treasurer of R. Hoe & Co., printing press manufacturers. In 1927 he went with the Electrical Research Products Inc., the Telephone Company subsidiary that developed the talking motion picture, serving as Comptroller and then as Treasurer, and in 1935 became Financial Vice President of Paramount Pictures, Inc., upon the reorganization of that company. In 1938 he was appointed Director of Finance of the U. S. Maritime Commission in Washington where he served until he retired in 1946. It was his initiative that led to the adoption of the "Regulation V" loan plan for the financing of Government Controls in World War II. He is a Past President of the Princeton Engineering Association, was for some time a member of the Committee on Taxation and Finance of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association, a director of the Morris Plan Bank, New Haven and a director and Vice President of the Mid City Trust Company, Plainfield, N. J. He is a member of the Advisory Board, Columbus Circle Branch, Manufacturers Trust Company, New York. For some years he was a Deacon in the Plymouth Congregational Church, New Haven, and later an Elder in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church, Plainfield, N. J., serving also as a member of the Plainfield Community Chest Budget Committee. He is a member of the Society of Colonial Wars in New Jersey, the American Society of Naval Architects, the Propeller Club of the United States, the American Academy of Political and Social Science, the Foreign Policy Association, a Fellow of the American Geographical Society, and an associate member of the U. S. Naval Institute. He is the author of "The Merchant Marine and World Frontiers" (Cornell Maritime Press, 1945); "Liberia, America's African Friend" (Univ. of North Carolina Press, 1952); one of the authors of "The Business of Shipbuilding" (Am. Soc. of Naval Architects, 1948) and author of various articles in technical and other magazines. He was elected a Trustee of the Class in 1943 and Secretary in 1948.

OCCUPATION: Educator — Retired
RESIDENCE: 3579 Arlington Avenue, Riverside, Calif.
MARRIED: October 29, 1911, (Mrs.) Madeline Masten Newton, at Philadelphia, Pa.

"Major" Anderson prepared for Princeton at the Bloomfield (N. J.) High School, entering with the Class in September 1899 and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude in June 1903 with high honors in the Classics. He was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and was a member of Clio Hall. He was Special Fellow in Latin at Princeton 1903-1904 and Instructor in Latin 1904-1905, receiving from Princeton the degree of M.A. During the next five years he taught in Chicago, at Dry Run, Pa., and Seattle, Wash., then returned to Princeton for work with the University Press. In 1913 he resumed his profession as a teacher, first at the Portland (Ore.) Academy, then, successively at the Riverside Polytechnic High School and Junior College, Calif., and the Latin Collegiate School, New York City. In 1919 he was made Head of the English Department of the Riverside (Cal.) Junior College, a position he held with distinction until he retired in 1950. During this period he also served as Instructor in English and Public Speaking at the University of California Summer Sessions, 1921-1925. In 1923 he began conducting classes in Short Story Writing at the University of California in Los Angeles and has continued in this work up to the present.

Born: March 23, 1881, at Washington, D. C.
Died: December 28, 1925
Occupation: Accountant
Married: October 23, 1920, Catherine Mount Simpson, at St. Stephan's Church, New York City

Chase prepared for Princeton at the Western High School, Washington, D. C., and entered with the Class in September 1899. He was an editor of the Bric-a-Brac and a member of Tiger Inn. Shortly after graduation with the degree of A.B. he went with the Santa Fe Railroad in the New York office, and later with the auditing department of the New York Central Railroad. In 1916 he entered the employ of the Rockefeller Foundation in New York, becoming Assistant Comptroller. His home was in Flushing, Long Island.

John Gassaway Armstrong

Born: July 2, 1881, at Hagerstown, Md.
Died: April 7, 1924
Occupation: Manufacturer

John, who prepared for Princeton at the Hagerstown High School, and entered with us in September 1899, came from a Princeton family that included his father, Alexander Armstrong, 1868 and three brothers, Alexander, '99, N. Bruce, '01, and Edward McP., '04. In college he was editor-in-chief of the Daily Princetonian, editor of the Bric-a-Brac, a member of Cap and Gown, the Monday Night Club and the Class Day Committee. After receiving his A.B. degree in 1903 he engaged for a time in business in Philadelphia, moving to Detroit in 1911, where he organized the Armstrong Company, manufacturers and specialists in the field of plastic cements, of which company he was President at the time of his death. John took an active part in Princeton affairs, was President of the Princeton Alumni Association of Michigan from 1919 to 1921, and for a number of years served on the Graduate Council as representative of the Michigan alumni. At the time of his death he was Regional Vice President of his Class for the Fifth District. That Princeton was very close to John's heart was evident from his will, the first item of which was a bequest of $100,000 to the University to endow eight scholarships, four from the State of Michigan and four from his native state, Maryland. By a codicil dated a fortnight before his death he bequeathed $10,000 to the Class of 1903 to be "used and expended by said Class, through its proper officers, for the best interests of the University as may be determined by the Executive Committee of said Class." In 1935 the principal of this bequest was turned over by the Class to the University, the interest, meanwhile, having been used as a fund to assist in tuition payments of sons of the Class in the University. Subsequently, the income of the fund has been similarly used as occasion arose.

Morgan Ashley

Born: April 11, 1881, at East Orange, N. J.
Occupation: Clergyman
Residence: Crescent City, Florida
Married: April 27, 1911, Elizabeth Howell Miller, at New York City

"Lady" prepared for Princeton at the Dearborn-Morgan School, Orange, N. J., and entered with the Class in September 1899. He received his B.S. degree in June 1903 and took postgraduate work at Princeton, 1903-1904. He was a member of the Quadrangle Club and of the Orphic Order, and was Vice President of St. Paul's Society. He studied for the ministry at the General Theological Seminary, New York City, 1904-1907, beginning his pastoral work at St. Paul's Church, Butler, N. J. In 1908 he became Rector of St. Stephen's Church, Plainfield, N. J., was Curate at All Angels Church, New York City, 1910-1912 and from then until 1919 was Rector of Christ Church, Bordentown, N. J. He then became Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church in Rutland, Vt., where he served for twenty-three years. For the greater part of his Rutland pastorate he was also Chaplain of the Women's State Prison of Vermont. He was Secretary for six years to the Episcopal Synod of New England, a Deputy to six General Conventions of the Episcopal Church, and a Trustee of the Rutland Public Library. He is now a member of the Florida Department of Public Welfare, having been appointed by the Governor. During World War I, being too old for the draft and having been turned down several times for voluntary service, he worked with the Chaplain at Camp Dix, N. J., and as a Four-Minute Man for the State. He held a commission as Captain in the Reserve Officers Chaplains Corps from 1925 until 1940, when he was transferred, in December 1940, as Protestant Divisional Chaplain of the 43rd Division of the National Guard, with rank of Major. In November 1942 he was made Lieutenant Colonel. After serving for a year with the 43rd Division at Camp Blanding, Fla., upon the entry of the United States into World War II, he resigned his pastorate in order to continue in the service and in January 1942 was made Chief of the Chaplains Branch at Camp Blanding, having been adjudged past the age at which he could be assigned to active duty overseas. In December 1942 he was transferred to Moore General Hospital, Swannanoa, N. C., where he served as Post Chaplain until his retirement from active service in 1945 when he reached the statutory retirement age, having been the only member of the Class in the active service during World War II. In May 1945 he took a temporary rectorship at Trinity Church, St. Augustine, Fla., and in November of that year became Episcopal Student Chaplain at the University of Florida at Gainesville, continuing in that capacity for the next four years, when he accepted his present rectorship of the Church of the Holy Comforter at Crescent City, Fla. While at the University of Florida he was made an honorary member of the Kappa Alpha Order, a decidedly Southern organization, his election being a singular honor for a "Damn Yankee."

John Byram Austin

Died: December 21, 1900

John prepared for Princeton at the Philadelphia High School. He developed acute appendicitis and died after a seemingly successful operation which, however, left him in a condition of extreme weakness.

Clifford Rea Babson

Born: February 15, 1881, at Brooklyn, N. Y.
Occupation: Sales Executive — Retired
Residence: 33 High Street, Orange, N. J.
Married: March 18, 1922, Mary Elizabeth King, at East Orange, N. J.

Cliff prepared for Princeton at the Dearborn-Morgan School, Orange, N. J., entering with the Class in September 1899 and graduating with the degree of B.S. in June, 1903. He was a member of the Charter Club. On leaving college he became associated with the United Lead Company in New York as a salesman. In 1911 he took charge of the New York sales office of United Lead's associated company, the U. S. Cartridge Co., and in 1919 was made that company's Director of Sales. In 1927 he became Vice President and Director of Sales of the Winchester Repeating Arms Company of New Haven, Conn., and in 1932 resumed his office as Director of Sales of the U. S. Cartridge Company, leaving that concern in 1937 to form the firm of Ingersoll, Norvell, and Babson, sales and business consultants, with offices in New York City. He retired from active business some five years later. During World War I he served as small arms expert with the Ordnance Department in the New York district, and since his retirement has been active in local charities in the Oranges and Maplewood, New Jersey.

David Baird, Jr.

Born: October 10, 1881, at Camden, N. J.
Occupation: Insurance
Business Address: Fifth and Market Streets, Camden 2, N. J.
Residence: Faughan River Farm, Delaware Township, R.F.D., Marlton, N. J. (Camden County)
Married: June 21, 1940, (Mrs.) Frances H. Smith

Dave prepared for Princeton at the Penn Charter School, Philadelphia, and at Lawrenceville; entered with the Class in September 1899 and received degree of C.E. in June 1903. He was a member of the Cottage Club. After graduation he entered his father's lumber business, the David Baird Company, of which he later became President in 1927, serving until 1950 when the business was discontinued. This company carried on a wholesale and retail lumber business in Camden and operated saw mills in the South. In December 1929 he was appointed United States Senator from New Jersey to fill the unexpired term of Senator Walter E. Edge, serving until December 1930 when he resigned. In 1931 he was the uncontested Republican nominee for Governor and was defeated in the November election. Meanwhile he had become associated with the Smith-Austermuhl Company, Insurance brokers of Camden, N. J., and on the death of the president of that company, in 1938 succeeded to that office and became the company's operating head. At that time he gave up his activities in the political field so that he could give almost his entire attention to Smith-Austermuhl Company. In 1928 he purchased a farm in Delaware Township, Camden County, N. J., where he specialized in raising pure bred Jersey Cattle, first as a hobby and later as a business, and moved to the farm in 1936 to make it his permanent home. In 1939 he discontinued the operation of the farm and is now truly a gentleman farmer. His directorships include the First Camden National Bank & Trust Company; Camden Fire Insurance Association; New York and Long Branch Railroad Co., West Jersey Seashore Railroad and the Market Building and Loan Association of Camden, of which association he is President.

Born: August 13, 1879 at Shamokin, Pa.
Occupation: University President-Emeritus
Residence: 112 West Upsal Street, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.
Married: June 27, 1906, Ella Philson Fischer, at Shamokin, Pa.

Charlie prepared for Princeton at the Shamokin High School and entered with the Class in September, 1899, receiving his degree of A.B. in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall and of the Cannon Club and was Manager of the Gym Team. He studied law at the Harvard Law School, receiving his LL.B. degree in June, 1906, and was admitted to the Pennsylvania bar in 1908, having meanwhile operated a coal mine in West Virginia. For several years he practiced law in Philadelphia. In 1920 he was elected President of the National Bank of North Philadelphia to which he then devoted his entire time, until, in 1926, he took the Presidency of Temple University, a position he held until he retired as President Emeritus in 1941. His connection with Temple University dates from 1914, when he was elected to its Board of Trustees, his activities including chairmanship of the Temple Endowment Fund Campaign. It was through this fund, and largely as a result of Charlie's work, that Temple University was able to build a practically new plant, while at the same time changing and improving its standards until, under his administration, it achieved a high academic status that gave it a place among the outstanding educational centers of the country. He has traveled extensively, having made two trips around the world, and in 1917 was commissioned by the Red Cross and later by the Near East Relief to examine conditions affecting Armenian and Syrian refugees in the Balkans, Syria, Armenia, Palestine and Egypt, his travels in this connection taking him by way of Shanghai, Peking, the Trans-Siberian Railway and Petrograd, and leading to a book, published in 1918, "Russia After the Revolution." Always active in civic affairs, he was the recipient of the Kiwanis Distinguished Service Medal and the Wanderer's Club Medal for 1933 as the Outstanding Citizen of Philadelphia. He holds honorary LL.B. degrees from Princeton University, the University of Pennsylvania, and from Lafayette and Ursinus Colleges, and Bucknell, and Doctor of Humane Letters from Temple University. He was awarded Order of Merit by the Hungarian Government. He is a Past President of the Association of College Presidents of Pennsylvania, served on the Pennsylvania State Council of Education and as a member of the Board of Visitors, U. S. Naval Academy. His business and public activities have included Chairmanship of the Board of the Bank of Philadelphia and Trust Company, Vice-Presidency of the Manheim Trust Company, Directorship of the Victory Loan for North Philadelphia, Trusteeship of the Welfare Federation of Philadelphia, Presidency of the Philadelphia Forum, and Pennsylvania State Chairmanship of the Drive for Finnish Relief to which he was appointed by President Hoover. Always active in the affairs of our Class, he was our Representative on the Graduate Council, 1919-1923, Vice President 1933-1938, and Class President 1938-1943. He was a Trustee of the Class corporation 1938-1948.

Bob prepared at Andover, entered Princeton with the Class in 1899, was graduated A.B. 1903, with Special Honors in History, Jurisprudence and Politics. He was a member of the Cottage Club and of Whig Hall and at graduation was Class Historian. He studied law at Washington University Law School, St. Louis, Mo., receiving the degree of LL.B. in June, 1905, and began the practice of law in St. Louis in partnership with Tom McPheeters. He early became active in political affairs in St. Louis, discontinued for a time his private law practice to serve as Secretary to the Mayor, and in 1911, became Associate City Counsel, in which capacity he served until 1917, when he entered the army, being commissioned a 1st Lieutenant, Field Artillery. Bob distinguished himself in World War I, being decorated by Marshal Petain as a Chevalier of the French Legion of Honor and receiving the American Distinguished Service Medal. He went to France in September, 1917, was promoted to Major and then to Lieut. Colonel. After several months of duty in the line he was transferred to the Judge Advocate's Department where he supervised the adjustment of all claims for damages by the American Army in France, Great Britain, Belgium and Luxembourg. His citation included the following: "The successful handling of the many complex problems in respect to the adjustment of claims was due in a large measure to his high professional attainments and sound judgment. He has rendered services of signal worth to the American Expeditionary Forces." On his return from the war he resumed the practice of law in St. Louis and was General Counsel for the Board of Education in that city. In 1922, leading citizens of St. Louis unsuccessfully supported Bob for Mayor. In 1929, he was elected President of the St. Louis Bar Association which he had previously served as Treasurer. He was the author of the invaluable "Military History of the Class of 1903," contained in our 20-year book, in which, as a result of tireless and loyal work on his part the story of 1903 in World War I, is told with a rare combination of accuracy and literary skill. In 1930, Bob became the representative of the St. Louis Princeton Alumni Association on the Graduate Council.

Whitney Darrow

Born: May 16, 1881, at Geneva, N. Y.
Occupation: Book Publisher
Residence: 51 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Business Address: 597 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Married: (1) November 14, 1905, May T. Barton, at Pleasant View, Pa.; d. January 1, 1941
(2) March 28, 1942, (Mrs.) Alice Waring Dunham, at Princeton, N. J.

Whitney prepared for Princeton at the Geneva (N. Y.) High School, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a Member of Whig Hall and of the Freshman and University Banjo and Mandolin Clubs. While still a Freshman he became associated with the group of Alumni who started the Princeton Alumni Weekly, the first issue of which appeared in April, 1900, and on graduation he became the Weekly's first Graduate Manager, continuing in that office until 1917. Meanwhile, in 1905, he obtained the backing of Charles Scribner, '75, and organized the Princeton University Press and became Manager and served as Secretary of the Press until 1917. He then became associated with Charles Scribner's Sons, Publishers, in New York City, as Book Advertising Manager, continuing, however, his interest in the University Press. He later was made Business Director of the Trade Book Department of Scribner's, was elected a Director of the Company in 1922, Vice President in 1930, and Executive Vice President in 1946. He made his home successively in Princeton, Montclair, N. J., Greenwich, Conn., and New York City. Always active in the affairs of Princeton and of the Class, he was Reunion Chairman 1907-1913, Secretary of the Class from 1913 to 1917, editing the Decennial Record, was again Chairman of the Reunion Committee 1920-1923, and Class President 1923-1928. From 1948 to 1951 he was President of the Princeton University Press, having served as a Trustee 1917-1951. He was the Vice Chairman of Princeton's Bi-Centennial 1945-1947 and helped toward the unusual character and outstanding success of that celebration. He was Secretary of the University Club of New York 1939-1941 and President 1941-1943. He was President of the Daily Princetonian Publishing Co. 1919-1946. As World War II drew to a close, he went as Emissary of the American Book Publishing Industry to Australia and New Zealand, officially representing the Book Publishers Bureau under O.W.I. auspices, to study book publishing and book distribution in those two countries. On retiring from the Presidency of the Princeton University Press, that organization published a monograph commemorative of his bringing about its existence and being its active Director 1905-1917, with illustrations by his famous cartoonist son, Whitney Darrow, Jr.

William Sanderson Detwiler

Born: March 2, 1881, at Columbia, Pa.
Died: October 23, 1947, at Lancaster, Pa.
Occupation: District Manager, Armstrong Cork Co.
Married: January 2, 1918, Gertrude Mott, at Burlington, N. J.

"Sandy" prepared for Princeton at Yeates Academy, Lancaster, and at Mercersburg, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a Member of Whig Hall and took an active part in athletics, earning his class numerals. After graduation he engaged in the cotton manufacturing business at Chester, Pa., managed a large farm near Columbia, and was President of the First National Bank of Columbia. At the time of his death he was Vice President of the successor, First Columbia National Bank. His enlistment as a private in the Fourth Infantry, Pennsylvania National Guard, in 1915, was the beginning of a distinguished military career that started with six months' service on the Mexican border. Within two months after enlistment he was made a 2nd Lieutenant and within five months Captain and Regimental Adjutant. In January, 1917, he was mustered into federal service for World War I, organized and became commander of the 108th Machine Gun Battalion and Brigade Adjutant to the 56th "Iron" Brigade, 28th "Keystone" Division, receiving his Majority a year later. He served in every campaign of his division and was engaged in the battles of Aisne - Marne, Oise - Asne, St. Mihiel, Meuse - Argonne and Chateau-Thierry. He was wounded and twice gassed, and won many decorations including the French Chateau-Thierry and Verdun medals, the White Russian Compassionate Heart medal, and the French Croix de Guerre with palm. His interest in the National Guard and in military affairs continued throughout his life and included his organization, in Lancaster, of a group of prominent citizens as sponsors of the Guard to promote enlistments. In World War II he was Chairman of the Committee of National Defense of Lancaster, and served in Washington as special representative of the Armstrong Cork Company with which he had become associated in 1920. Aside from his military activities, Sandy had, throughout his life, a wide variety of civic and religious interests. In his early years at Columbia, Pa., he was, among other things, Burgess for four years, Director and Vice President of the Chamber of Commerce, Trustee of the Presbyterian Church, President of the Chautauqua Associates, Treasurer of the Boy Scouts, President of the Democratic Club (but before the end of the first Roosevelt administration, he became a staunch Republican), Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Manufacturers Association and a Member of its Arbitration Committee. In later years at Lancaster he was a Vestryman of St. James Episcopal Church, a Member of the Newcomen Society, President of the Donegal Society, a Regent of the Sons of the Revolution, President of the Lancaster Country Club, and Vice President of the Hamilton Club.

In Sandy's memory, his sister, Mrs. William Jennings Price of Washington, D. C., established the "W. Sanderson Detwiler 1903 Prize," to be awarded annually to that member of the Junior Class who, in the judgment of his classmates, has done the most for Princeton. This prize, a silver "Paul Revere" bowl, first awarded in June, 1949, ranks with the M. Taylor Pyne Honor Prize (awarded annually to a Member of the Senior Class for somewhat similar qualifications, as determined by the President and Secretary of the University and the Dean of the College), as the highest general distinctions that can be conferred upon an undergraduate.

Donald DeWitt

Born: 1879, at Lawrenceville, N. J.
Died: September 9, 1908, at El Paso, Texas
Occupation: Teacher

Donald prepared for Princeton at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899. Ill health made it necessary for him to live in a more favorable climate, and in Sophomore year he left Princeton and entered Colorado College from which he was later graduated. He then taught Elocution and English in Colorado College until failing health made it necessary for him to give up his work. He moved to Arizona and later to El Paso, Texas.

Died: February 18, 1946, at Montclair, N. J.
Occupation: Engineer — Dairy Farmer — Banker
Married: March 25, 1911, Edna Crowell Osborne, at Newark, N. J.

Charlie prepared for Princeton at Trinity School, New York City, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of C.E. with honors in June, 1903. He was a Member and President of Elm Club. Upon leaving college he engaged in construction work, first with C. E. Hedden Co., of which he became Vice President, and then with his own companies which, under the names of Doe & Whittier, Doe-Wathy Co., and Doe Construction Co., engaged extensively in building construction in Newark and in Essex County, N. J. At one time he was also Vice President of the American Concrete Steel Co. His companies gained a high reputation for the quality of their work, which included large industrial plants and many bank buildings, club houses and public buildings. In World War I, he was in personal charge of the construction of the U. S. Proving Grounds and Officers Training Camp at Lakehurst, N. J. For twenty-five years, before moving to Montclair, Charlie lived in Glen Ridge, N. J., serving his community as Borough Councilman, Mayor and Member of the Glen Ridge Sinking Fund Commission. In 1933, he became Vice President and Trust Officer of the Glen Ridge Trust Company, holding that office until the time of his death. His activities included Membership in the Essex Troop of Newark, Vice Presidency of the Newark Chamber of Commerce, and Trusteeships of Dana College and the Glen Ridge Congregational Church. His hobby was farming, and some years before his death he bought Highlands Farm at Long Valley, N. J., which he operated as a dairy farm, selling it shortly before his death.

Occupation: Business and Scientific Interest in Reforestation

Married: April 27, 1904, Mary H. C. Cooley, Bay City, Michigan

Jim prepared for Princeton at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his B.S. degree in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall and of the Cottage Club. Following graduation he engaged in the lumber business at Port Blakely and Everett, Washington, and subsequently took up his residence on the shores of Lake Washington, opposite the City of Seattle. His deep interest in the lumber business led him to study the possibilities of increasing the supply of timber by developing, through scientific hybridization, new and improved types of fast growing timber, principally of the genus pinus. After several years educating himself in genetics, he consulted with Mr. Luther Burbank, at Santa Rosa, California, and studied his methods of developing new varieties and species of flowers and vegetables, and especially his paradox walnut, and a site was finally selected for the EDDY TREE BREEDING STATION at Placerville, California, the name of which was subsequently changed by him to the INSTITUTE OF FOREST GENETICS. Upon scientifically demonstrating that the forest type of trees of the pine family could be hybridized, on the advice of men who had become interested in the work at the Institute, he presented by deed to the United States Government as a gift to the American people, all the property and scientific knowledge so far obtained. The Institute has been in operation for over 25 years and has demonstrated to the timber world, not only in the United States, but wher-

Arizona as Land Examiner and Forest Ranger. He was promoted to Forest Supervisor and for five years was in charge of the Tusayan National Forest (now Kaibab) and of the Grand Canyon National Monument (South of Colorado River) before it became a National Park. He left the Forest Service in 1917 to go with the Saginaw & Manistee Lumber Company and was associated with this company, mostly as a land and timber specialist, off and on for thirteen years. In 1922 he undertook development of a tourist resort at his Mountain Spring Ranch property near Williams, Arizona, and this became a popular stopping place for thousands of tourists. He sold his resort property in 1941 and moved to Prescott, Arizona, where he devoted his time to managing another ranch owned by him, and his wife's two Iowa farms. In 1943 he retired and moved to Santa Barbara, Calif., and later to Auburn, Calif., where he now makes his home. During World War II, he served for some time as County Supervisor in the Farm Security Administration and later as a volunteer in the U. S. Coast Guard Auxiliary at Santa Barbara.

"Pop" Herrmann entered Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, and received his degree of B.S. in June, 1903. After graduation he engaged in the real estate business in Jersey City, in which occupation he remained active up to the time of his death. His home was in Westfield, N. J. For some time he served officially as Searcher of Titles for Hudson County.

Charles Conrad Hewitt

Born: April 17, 1881, at Trenton, N. J.
Occupation: Educator — Retired
Residence: 29 Bryn Mawr Avenue, Trenton, N. J.
Married: June 30, 1919, Elizabeth Marie Schwab, at Atlantic City, N. J.

"Chick" prepared for college at the State Model School, Trenton, N. J., entering Lehigh University in 1899 and coming to Princeton in September, 1900, as a Sophomore. He received his A.B. degree cum laude in June, 1903, with high honors in English, was the winner of the Baird Prize and the Class of '70 Sophomore English Prize. He was a member of Clio Hall and of the University Glee Club. After graduation he taught in the Linsly Institute, Wheeling, W. Va., and in the public schools of Westfield, N. J., and in 1905 was appointed Instructor in History of Education in the New Jersey State Normal School, Trenton, an institution that later became the New Jersey State Teachers College and with which he continued in the English Department until his retirement in June, 1948, after 43 years of continuous service. He is the author of numerous articles in educational publications. After retiring from the teaching profession he served for a time as field agent for Confidential Reports, Inc., of Philadelphia, an organization in the motion picture theater field, and later became Assistant Manager of the Mayfair Theater in Trenton.

Paxton Pattison Hibben

Born: December 5, 1880, at Indianapolis, Ind.
Died: December 1, 1928
Occupation: Diplomatic Service — Writer — Etc.
Married: October 17, 1916, Cecile Craik of Montgomery, Ala., at Athens, Greece

Pax prepared for Princeton at Shortridge High School, Indianapolis, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude (magna cum laude in modern languages) in June, 1903. As an undergraduate he won various prizes, including the Class of '70 Sophomore English Prize, First Junior German Prize, Baird Poetry Prize and First Lynde Debate Prize. He was Washington's Birthday Orator in Senior year and Commencement Orator, and served as Managing Editor of the Nassau Literary Magazine, Editor of the Daily Princetonian, Editor of the Bric-a-Brac, and Associate Editor of the Tiger. He was a member of Whig Hall, the Monday Night Club, the Chemical Society, the French Club and the Triangle Club. On graduation he studied law at the Harvard Law School for a year and took an A.M. degree. Later he was admitted to the Indiana Bar and to practice before the U. S. Supreme Court. In 1905 he entered the diplomatic service as Third Secretary of the American Embassy at Petrograd, Russia, and thereafter served in various capacities in the American Legations in Mexico, Colombia, The Netherlands, and Chile, and in several instances was Charge d'Affaires. He became active in the Progressive Party in the 1912 and 1914 campaigns. When war broke out in Europe he became a war correspondent for Collier's Weekly in Germany, France and England and staff correspondent for the Associated Press in Holland, France, Italy, Serbia and Greece. On the entry of the United States into World War I he entered the U. S. Army, was commissioned a First Lieutenant of Field Artillery, served as Artillery Instructor at Camp Grant, Ill., and was sent to France in September, 1918. After the Armistice he was assigned to duty under the Finance Officer S.O.S. and was appointed Assistant Judge Advocate of the General Court Martial in Paris. In May, 1919, he was promoted to Captain, Field Artillery. His military duties included intelligence work and service in the Historical Section of the Army General Staff, as well as service with the Advance Post, Army of Occupation at Treves, Germany, and with the Inspector General of the A.E.F. at G.H.Q., Paris. In 1919, after leaving the Army, he became a member of the mission to the Near East, headed by General Harboard. In 1920 he was made Publicity Director of the Near East Relief and in 1921 was with the Greek army in Asia Minor as special correspondent for Leslie's Weekly. This was followed by service as Secretary of the Russian Commission of the Near East Relief, as Secretary of the Russian Red Cross Commission in America and as Executive Secretary of the American Committee for Relief of Russian Children. In 1922 he was a Delegate to the International Conference on the Russian Famine, at Berlin, and in 1923 was Vice-Director for the U. S. High Commission of the League of Nations for Relief in Russia. During these foreign activities and afterward, he wrote extensively for leading American and British periodicals. Much of his writing reflected great sympathy for the people of Russia and of the Near East generally, and in 1922 he was described by the Boston Transcript as a leader in the "Red" movement in the United States, as a result of which "Pax" instituted a suit for libel against that paper. He was the author of "Constantine I and the Greek People" (Century Co., 1920) and "Henry Ward Beecher: An American Portrait" (G. H. Doran Co., 1927), a book characterized by Sinclair Lewis, at the time of its republication in 1942 as having been, when first published, "a little ahead of its time." "Pax" was a Chevalier of the Order of St. Stanislaus of Russia, Officer of the Order of the Redeemer of Greece, and recipient of the Order of the Hidden Treasure of Japan. A tablet inscribed with his name is set in the wall of the mausoleum tomb of Lenin in Moscow. He was a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society of London, Fellow of the American Geographical Society, and Member of the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Sam Higginbottom

Born: October 27, 1874, at Manchester, England
Occupation: Agricultural Missionary — Retired, 1945 (Reactivated 1949 as Pres. Christian Service Training Center)
Residence: Cody Villa, Babson Park, Florida
Married: October 28, 1904, Jane Ethelind Cody, at Bombay, India

Sam, who came to the United States from Wales in 1894 determined to obtain an education that would fit him to enter the field of Christian Missions, prepared for college at Dwight L. Moody's Mount Hermon School in Massachusetts. In the Fall of 1899 he entered Amherst College where he spent his Freshman and Sophomore years, and in September, 1901, came to Princeton as a Junior, receiving his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a Member of Clio Hall and of the Bird Club and was Captain of the Checker Team. Immediately after graduation he was sent by the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions to India, where for several years he taught Economics and Biology in the Allahabad Christian College and in addition had charge of the leper colony and home for the blind. During this period he became convinced that India must learn to feed itself by improved agricultural methods, as a necessary foundation for the work of the Christian Missions. He therefore returned to the United States to study Agriculture at the Ohio State University, where he received the degree of B.Sc. in Agriculture in 1911, and was awarded the degree of A.M. in Economics by Princeton. Returning to India, he and his wife (a cousin of "Buffalo Bill" Cody) established the Allahabad Agricultural Institute, which, notwithstanding considerable well-meant but persistent opposition on the part of other Missionaries who lacked Sam's vision, and notwithstanding also local religious prejudices, especially on the part of the Hindus, and a constant struggle for recognition by the British and Indian governments who resisted the introduction of methods with which they were not familiar, became an outstanding success, and finally was acknowledged to be a major factor in the continuing efforts to raise the living standards throughout India. The improved agricultural methods demonstrated at the Allahabad Institute led to Sam's being made Director of Agriculture to the Gwalior Government (an Indian State) 1916-1919 and Agricultural Adviser to the States of Jodhpur, Bikaner and Indore (1913-1919), during all of which time he continued his work at Allahabad. In February, 1916, he gave a lecture at the opening of the Hindu University at Benares, the thesis of the lecture being "Agriculture: A Worthy Subject of University Study." Here he met Mahatma Gandhi, the two becoming close friends, although Sam was in later years one of the Mahatma's most severe critics. The success of the Allahabad Institute led also to the formation of a friendship with Jawarhalal Nehru. The intimate contact with these leaders gave Sam an unusual insight into some of the complex political, religious and economic problems that beset India. While on Sabbatical leave in the United States in 1939 he was elected Moderator of the Presbyterian Church in the U.S.A., holding that office for the usual term of a year, his duties taking him over the entire United States. He returned to India to be made President of the Allahabad Christian College (1940). He taught Bible and Economics at the Agricultural Institute while continuing his responsibilities as Principal. In 1945, under the compulsory retirement rule of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, he retired from active work in the Foreign Mission field and took up residence at Babson Park, Florida, where he has continued in agricultural work as a citrus grower, and has served as adviser to several Brahaman breeders in connection with the beef industry, making available his unique knowledge of Brahaman cattle, and arranging with the U. S. Department of Agriculture for the exchange of two Red Sindhi bulls and two heifers from the Allahabad herd for two Jersey heifers and two Jersey bulls from the U. S. experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., thus assisting materially in the improvement of dairy herds in Florida and the south. He has also, since his nominal retirement, founded at Babson Park a school for the practical training of Missionaries, the Christian Service Training Center. He has been the recipient of many Academic and Governmental honors, including the degree of Doctor of Philanthropy from Princeton (1925, the first such degree, honoris causa, to have been given by an American University), Master of Science (1928) and Doctor of Humane Letters (1940) from Amherst; Doctor of Science from Ohio State University (1952); Northfield Award of Significant Service, Mt. Hermon School (1938); Doctor of Humane Letters, Western Reserve University; the Kaisar-I-Hind Medal, first class, for Public Service in India (1924) with added bar (1944); the King George V Jubilee Medal (1935), and the King George VI Coronation Medal (1937). Mrs. Higginbottom's work at Allahabad was likewise recognized by the Government of India by the award to her of the same three medals. Sam is generally credited with having done more for India's agriculture than any other one man. The Allahabad Agricultural Institute that he founded has become a complete college of Agriculture and Home Economics, with an extensive plant of six hundred acres of land. Its graduates are to be found all over their country, teaching and demonstrating, and now, with American Point Four, Ford Foundation and Rockefeller Foundation funds available and matched by funds from the Indian Government, Prime Minister Nehru is expanding the methods he observed some years ago when he visited Sam at the Institute, and the Ford Foundation is financing a chain of agricultural training centers, the combined effect of which is expected to reach a third of India's 360 millions. Sam is the author of numerous articles and papers relating to agriculture and to his work in India, and of three books, "The Gospel and the Plow" (Macmillan, New York, 1921), "What Does Jesus Expect of the Church?" (Revell, 1940) and "Sam Higginbottom, Farmer: An Autobiography" (Scribners, New York, 1949). Of his children, all but one were born in India.

Born: September 21, 1879, at Southington, Conn.
Occupation: Architect
Residence: 925 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y.
Business Address: 101 Park Avenue, New York 17, N. Y.
Married: December 14, 1918, Claire Trumbull VanLennep, New York City

Charlie prepared for Princeton at the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut (Cheshire), entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his C.E. degree cum laude in June, 1903. He was a member of the Engineering Society. Following graduation he engaged in construction work in and around New York City. Enrolled at Columbia University in 1910 for Graduate Courses, he continued studies in 1911. He was licensed to practice architecture in New Jersey in 1912 and in 1912-1913 was a member of the Jersey City Plan Commission. In 1913 he opened an office in New York City for the practice of architecture, was authorized by the State of New York to employ the title of Architect, and in 1918 became a partner in the firm of Delano, Aldrich and Charles H. Higgins, Architects. He later formed a partnership with his brother, Ralph B. Higgins, '12, which terminated with the Second World War. He continues in the Architects Building, 101 Park Avenue, New York City, the active practice of his profession. During World War I he was commissioned Major and served in the U. S. Army, Ordnance Department, stationed first at Washington and later at Camp Mead. Following the war, having been made Lieutenant Colonel, he continued in the Reserve, later Retired Reserve. His work as an architect has included many notable buildings and other undertakings, among them in 1914 the Washington Market interior in New York City; the Research Laboratories of the International Business Machines Company at Endicott, N. Y.; Valeria Home, Oscawana, N. Y. (Delano, Aldrich and Charles H. Higgins); the U. S. Pavilion at the International Exposition, Paris (1937) with Associates; various buildings and exposition pavilions for the International Business Machines Company, including World Headquarters (office) Building, 590 Madison Avenue, New York City, and numerous industrial plants and public and private houses and buildings. He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, having served as Chairman of the Finance Committee and of the Committee on Professional Practices, and as President of its New York Chapter; the Architectural League of New York, of which he has been Treasurer; the American Fine Arts Society of which he was for several years a Trustee and Secretary; the New York Society, Military and Naval Officers of World Wars; the Military Order of World Wars, of which he was at one time Adjutant; the Reserve Officers Association of the United States, Manhattan Chapter, of which he has been President. He remains an Elder, Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, after recently serving as Ruling Elder. His designs have been the subject of many illustrated articles in professional and other magazines and he is the author of a number of articles in various periodicals on architectural and engineering subjects. Always active in Princeton affairs, he served on the Graduate Council for approximately 25 years; was at one time President of the Princeton Alumni Association of Hudson County, N. J.; for ten years was a Member of the Council of the Princeton Club of New York and from 1919 to 1923 was a member of the Class Executive Committee. He was an organizer with others of the Princeton Engineering Association, of which he was Secretary from the time of its establishment in 1912 until, in 1919, he became its President for a term and continuously since then has been a member of its Executive Committee. Of the France-America Society he is a Director and member of the Executive Committee.

Died: May 19, 1905, at Cambridge, Mass.
Occupation: Student

Jim entered Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, and received his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall and of the Canoe Club, and Business Manager of the Tiger. On graduation from Princeton he entered the Harvard Law School but died before the completion of his studies there.

Morris Miller Hiltebeitel

Born: January 26, 1874, at Green Lane, Pa.
Occupation: Electrical Engineer — Retired
Residence: Green Lane, Pa.
Married: June 12, 1919, Anna S. Cressman, at Sumneytown, Pa.

Morris prepared for Princeton at the Perkioman Seminary, Pennsburg, Pa., entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude in June, 1903, with honors in Mathematics. After graduation he entered the employ of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company as an erecting engineer, first in Pittsburgh and later in Chicago; received the degree of E.E. from Westinghouse; and in 1915 was made Superintendent of the Turbine Division of the Westinghouse Company for the Philadelphia District. Since retiring in 1927 he has devoted himself to fruit growing.

Burt Bradley Hodgman

Born: May 6, 1877, at Coldwater, Michigan
Died: January 20, 1935, at New York, N. Y.
Occupation: Hydraulic Engineer
Married: July 11, 1907, Grace Porter Wilding, Fort Wayne, Ind.

"Brute" Hodgman prepared for college at the Englewood High School, Chicago, and entered the University of Michigan in 1897. In September, 1899, he transferred to Princeton as a member of 1903 in the Engineering Department and received his degree of C.E. from Princeton. He was a member of Whig Hall and of the Quadrangle Club, captained the 1903 Freshman football team and was heavyweight wrestling champion in Freshman year, thus winning his class numerals. Later he played football on the varsity squad but an injury prevented his full participation as a member of the team. Difficulty in obtaining a passing mark in Hydraulics in his Senior year jeopardized temporarily his graduation with the Class, but ironically did not prevent him from becoming one of America's outstanding water-works engineers. On graduation he became associated with the Pitometer Company of New York, serving as Engineer on waste surveys, until 1907. An extensive survey under his direction in the city of Philadelphia led to substantial reduction of underground water-system losses and his appointment as Assistant Engineer for the City of Philadelphia. In 1907 he was made Chief Engineer of the National Water Main Cleaning Company of New York, of which he became Vice President, a connection he retained until his death. He was a pioneer in the field of water-main cleaning, in which he found his life work, establishing for himself a nation-wide reputation. He presented many papers before the various water-works associations and served as an expert witness in several valuation and rate cases where his extensive knowledge of Hydraulics gave him the voice of authority. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Water Works Association, the Southwest Water Works Association and the New England Engineering Society, and an associate member of the American Railway Engineering Association. He was actively identified with Princeton Alumni affairs, including service as a member of the Graduate Council, and as President of the Orange (N. J.) Alumni Association.

Walter Franklin Hollenbach

Born: March 13, 1876, at Claussville, Pa.
Occupation: Educator — Retired
Residence: 88 Summit Avenue, Jersey City, N. J.
Married: August 1, 1906, Kathryn M. Herstine, at Revere, Pa.

"Holly" prepared for college at the Perkiomen Seminary, Pennsburg, Pa., entering Princeton with the Class in September 1899 and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude in June 1903 with special honors in English. He was winner of the Thomas B. Wanamaker English Prize, was a member of Clio Hall in which he won several prizes, was a member of the Book Ring, and an Editor of the Nassau Herald. After graduation he taught German for four years in the Trenton, N. J. High School, meanwhile qualifying for his Master's degree which he received from Princeton in 1907. He had previously taught in the public schools of Durham, Pa., and in the Perkiomen Seminary. In 1907 he received an appointment to teach German in the Dickinson High School, Jersey City, N. J. and was later transferred to the Lincoln High School in the same city, where he taught Latin, German and English. In 1929 he became Principal, first of School No. 14 and then of School No. 28, Jersey City, in which capacity he continued until his retirement in 1947 after forty years of service in the Jersey City Schools during which he made the remarkable record of never having had a day's absence. He has been active in the Jersey City Teachers' Association and the New Jersey Teachers' Association and has served as a member of the State Pension Committee for Hudson County and as President of the Male High School Teachers' Association and of the Men Principals' Association. During World War I he was a member of the Legal Advisory Board of Jersey City and of the War Registration Board. Always deeply interested in Princeton affairs, he served a term as President of the Princeton Alumni Association of Hudson County and as Trustee and Chairman of the Secondary Schools' Committee of that Association. Since his retirement from active work as a Teacher he has been Chairman of the Admissions Committee of the Princeton Alumni Association of Hudson County, screening applicants for admission to the University and making recommendations with respect to scholarships.

Sidney Tarzewell Holt

Born: March 10, 1882, at Newark, N. J.
Occupation: Business
Residence: 39 Lincoln Park, Newark, N. J.
Business Address: 786 Broad Street, Newark, N. J.
Married: June 26, 1907, Elsie Loyal Rosseter, at Newark, N. J.

"Cupid" prepared for Princeton at the Newark, N. J. Academy, entering with the Class in September 1899. He received his degree of B.S. in June 1903 and of E.E. in 1905. He was a member of the Tower Club. After completing his post-graduate work in electrical engineering he first entered the employ of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey (1905-1906), then entered the family jewelry business in Newark, becoming Secretary and Treasurer and later President of Frank Holt and Company and of Holts' Inc., Retail Diamond Merchants. He rapidly gained recognition as an expert in precious stones and from 1925 to 1930 engaged in diamond appraising. For some years he was interested in the manufacture of waterproofing materials and did consulting work in that connection. More recently he resumed his specialty as a diamond appraiser. He is the author of several monographs on precious stones.

Herbert Webb Hopkins

Born: July 26, 1880, at Brooklyn, N. Y.
Died: June 22, 1933
Occupation: Clergyman
Married: November 14, 1912, Ethel Moore, at Brooklyn, N. Y.

Herbert prepared for Princeton at the Boston Latin School and the Montclair High School, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall, was Junior Orator, and took high honors in Latin. For two years after graduation he taught in the Princeton Preparatory School and in Episcopal Academy, Philadelphia; then studied for the ministry at the General Theological Seminary, New York City. From 1908 to 1912, he was curate at St. Luke's Church, Montclair, N. J., and then rector of Trinity Church, Irvington, N. J. where he served until the spring of 1932, when ill health made it necessary for him to retire.

(2) January, 1950, Astrid Kohler

Dan prepared for Princeton at the Collegiate School, New York City, entering with the Class in September 1899 and receiving his B.S. degree in June, 1903. He was a member of the Elm Club, was Captain of the University Track Team in his Senior year and took a "first" in the Caledonian Games pole vault in each of his four years in college. He was Secretary and Treasurer of the Class in Junior year. Upon graduation he was for a short time with the White Automobile Company in Cleveland, Ohio, then took a course in Cornell University in milk bacteriology, and entered the employ of the Sheffield Farms Company, of which he was made Secretary in 1905. In 1927 he retired from the Sheffield Farms Company and for some years thereafter operated the Horton Pilsner Brewing Company of New York City. In 1939, he sold out his interest in the brewery. An ardent sportsman, he makes frequent hunting and fishing trips ranging from Canada to the Carolinas.

Charles Josiah Howard

Born: March 6, 1880, at Williamsport, Pa.
Died: December 17, 1921, at Emporium, Pa.
Occupation: Farmer of Emporium, Pa.
Married: (1) March 6, 1900, Mabel Cush, d. 1910
(2) 1912, Mary Blumble

Charlie prepared for college at the Cheshire (Conn.) Military Academy, entering Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, leaving later that year. He was a member of the 1903, freshman football team, earning his Class numerals. After leaving college he engaged in farming, which became his life occupation. In 1907, he was elected Treasurer of Cameron County, Pennsylvania and was the only man in that county who ever carried a solid precinct, having received every vote cast in his township of Portage.

Died: January 11, 1918, at Philadelphia, Pa.
Occupation: Physician
Married: January 19, 1910, Hattie Simpson Chapman, at Philadelphia, Pa.

"Doc" Howell prepared for Princeton at the Philadelphia Central High School, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree, A.B. cum laude, in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall and of the Quadrangle Club and was entitled to wear his class numerals. After graduation he taught mathematics at the Boys Country School, Baltimore, for a year, serving also as director of athletics; then entered the Medical School of the University of Pennsylvania, having won a competitive scholarship there, one of three offered in that department each year. He received his medical degree in 1908. He served as resident physician at the University Hospital, and as instructor in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania where he was in charge of the medical dispensary. Meanwhile he established an extensive private practice in Philadelphia and was visiting physician at the Presbyterian Hospital. For some ten years he was football coach at his old prep school, the Central High, and turned out many excellent teams.

Floyd Hurlbut

Born: January 22, 1879, at Arkport, N. Y.
Died: July 16, 1948
Occupation: Educator
Married: June 29, 1904, Margaret Taylor, at Arkport, N. Y.

Floyd prepared for college at the Arkport, N. Y. Union School and spent his Freshman year at Syracuse University, entering Princeton as a Sophomore in 1900, and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude in June, 1903, with special honors in modern languages. He was a member of Whig Hall. After graduation he studied at Teachers College, Columbia University, and at New York University, taking the degree of Master of Pedagogy in 1916. For two years he was Principal of the Union School at Oriskany, N. Y., then of the High School of West Winfield, N. Y. and later of the Islip, L. I. High School, his service as an educator being interrupted and amplified by a year in business. In 1918, he was appointed Superintendent of schools at Bay Shore, Long Island, in which capacity he served the community for twenty-one years until his retirement in 1939. He became one of the most widely known public educators in New York State, was a member of the N. Y. State Regents Syllabus and Examination Committees, served as first President of the Long Island zone of the N. Y. State Teachers Association, and was a member of many educational organizations. Two widely used text books bore his name on their title page; "The Business Man's English," (Macmillan, 1920), and "Introductory Business Training," (Ginn & Co.), sharing authorship of the former with Wallace E. Bartholomew, Commercial Specialist of the New York State Department of Education, and of the latter with Dr. John M. Brewer of the Harvard Graduate School of Business and Juvenilia Caseman of Buffalo. Aside from his work in the educational field, he was active in civic affairs, was secretary of the Rotary Club, Past Master of the West Winfield Masonic Lodge, Director of the South Side Bank of Bay Shore and of the Bay Shore Community Association, and during World War II was Chairman of the Islip Township Rationing Board. His three daughters all entered the teaching profession.

Wordsworth

The Daffodil Cup originated as a full-fledged Golf Trophy and for many years was played for over the 18-hole course. Recently the more strenuous game has yielded to the gentle art of putting as pictured above.

B.S. degree in June 1903. After graduating from Princeton he studied at the Harvard Law School where he took his LL.B. degree in June 1906. He was admitted to practice law in Arkansas in 1906, and in February 1913, became Reporter of the Supreme Court of Arkansas, in which office he continued until his enlistment in World War I. He was also Editor of the Arkansas Law Reporter. While practicing law, and after his return to civilian life, he became increasingly active in religious work, preaching Sundays in a mission church in Little Rock and conducting a Bible school. Although a layman he received repeated calls from churches in Arkansas and Tennessee to become their Pastor, and finally decided to give up the law as a profession and enter the ministry. In 1920, he was ordained a Minister in the Presbyterian Church (U. S.) and became Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Arkadelphia, Ark, where he served for two years until, in 1922, he was called to the pastorate of the Manhattan Presbyterian Church of El Paso, Texas. The following year he became Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Camden, Ark., and in 1925, was called to the Westminster Presbyterian Church, Memphis, Tenn., where he served for five years. In 1930, he received a call to the Westminster Presbyterian Church of Miami, Florida and was installed as its Pastor the following year, in which charge he continued until failing health compelled his retirement in 1952. He received the degree of D.D. from Arkansas College in 1926. In World War I he enlisted as a private in the Field Artillery, was sent to the Field Artillery Central Officer's Training School at Camp Zachary Taylor, Kentucky. He was commissioned a Captain and was about to be assigned a command when the Armistice intervened. He has served as Moderator of the Synods of Tennessee and Florida and as a member of the Presbyterian Assembly's Committee on Evangelism, and for many years as a Trustee of Thornwell Orphanage. During his Miami pastorate he was instrumental in organizing a number of churches to serve the needs of that growing community, including the churches at Miami Beach and Miami Shores. He has been active at various times in Princeton affairs, having been President of the Princeton Club of Arkansas (1917-1921), and Manager for Arkansas in the 1919 Endowment Fund Campaign. Later, after his move to Florida, he was Alumni Association Bicentennial Chairman for Southeastern Florida.

Alf entered Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, in the School of Science, leaving in 1901 to study at the Colorado School of Mines, where he received the degree of E.M. in 1905. While at Princeton he was a member of the Freshman Glee Club. After graduation from the School of Mines he engaged for ten years in mining in New Mexico, then went to Arizona where he spent the next thirty-five years in the mining industry, with an interlude during which he was a successful keeper of bees. As a consulting mining engineer he worked closely with the Arizona Department of Mineral Resources, was instrumental in organizing the Small Mine Operators Association, and in putting through the law for registration of engineers in Arizona. At one time he engaged in operations that included the uncovering of an old gold mine in the Superstition Mountain area, east of Phoenix, believed to have been the famed but elusive "Lost Dutchman" mine, from which, in the eighteen-eighties, a former immigrant was reputed to have brought out sacks of fine gold, but the location of which had remained a mystery.

Breck prepared for Princeton at the St. Louis High School, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree in 1904. He was a member of the Cottage Club. He studied law at the St. Louis Law School, and after spending some time in extensive travels, took up the practice of law in St. Louis in 1907. In 1909, as a result of a study embodied in a thesis on Politics in the Far East, the material for which he had gathered during his travels, he was awarded the degree of A.M. by Princeton. In 1914 he was elected Secretary of the St. Louis Bar Association and was later appointed Executive Secretary of a Commission to revise the Missouri Code of Judicial Procedure. In 1917, he was appointed by President Wilson Third Assistant Secretary of State. During his incumbency of this office he was the author of a State Department memorandum for the American Delegation to the Paris Peace Conference advocating a policy with respect to the previously German-held Pacific Islands which, had it been followed, would have prevented their falling into the hands of the Japanese, to be later employed against the United States in World War II. In 1920 he resigned from the State Department to become the Democratic candidate for U. S. Senator from Missouri, an office for which he was again the unsuccessful candidate in 1922. In his law practice he specialized in international law, with offices in Washington as well as St. Louis. He was a delegate to various city, state and national conventions of the Democratic Party, in 1924 was a floor manager for Mr. McAdoo at the New York Convention, and in 1932 was a floor manager for Mr. Roosevelt at the convention which nominated him for President. In 1933, he was appointed Ambassador to Italy, serving in that capacity until 1936, when ill health necessitated his relief, but in 1938, he again became active in the diplomatic service, being appointed Ambassador on Special Mission to Brazil, Uruguay and Argentina. The following year he was made a member of the Commission under the treaty with Italy for the Advancement of Peace, and in 1939, Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in charge of problems arising from the war in Europe, including the repatriation of U. S. citizens caught in war zones. In 1940, he became Assistant Secretary of State, an office he held until his retirement from active public life in 1944. During his incumbency as Assistant Secretary of State he served as a member of the War Communications Board and as a member of the group in the State Department that formulated the United States proposal for the United Nations as sent to the Dumbarton Oaks Conference to which he was a delegate. Throughout his public career he has been a consistent advocate of collaboration with other nations, originally those in the League of Nations, and later in the United Nations. He was an opponent of the 4-Power and 3-Power Treaties which scrapped the American Navy. An ardent collector of art, he has served as President of the St. Louis Art Society and as a member of the Board of Trustees of the Corcoran Art Gallery in Washington. He has served also as Vice President of the Jefferson Memorial Foundation and as a member of the Jefferson Bicentennial Commission. He received the honorary degree of LL.M. from Washington University (St. Louis) in 1920, and of LL.D. from Lincoln Memorial University in 1945. He is the author of "Genesis of the Constitution of the United States" (1925). In 1937, he was elected an Alumni Trustee of Princeton University, serving until 1941, and later was the representative of the U. S. Government at the Princeton Bicentennial, 1946-1947.

(2) April 2, 1925, Crete Skinner Hewitt

Bill prepared for Princeton at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of A.B. cum laude in June, 1903. He was a member of Whig Hall, the Triangle Club and the Orphic Order, Editor of the Nassau Literary Magazine, Managing Editor of The Tiger, University Organist and an usher at President Wilson's inauguration. He was a member of the Class Ode Committee and wrote both words and music of the 1903 Class Ode, reputed to be the only class ode that was singable and actually sung by a Princeton class. Upon graduation he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Columbia University, receiving his medical degree in 1907. After spending a Summer at Sorbonne he took up the practice of medicine in New York City, specializing in pediatrics and holding various positions in the City Department of Health. He was Chief of Staff of the New York City Hospital, the Vanderbilt Clinic and the Willard Parker Hospital. In 1912, he moved to Pasadena, California, where he became chief of the pediatric clinic of the College of Medicine of the University of California. During vacations he travelled extensively through the less well known parts of Europe, and was author of the book "A Motor Trip Through Northeastern Greece" (Partridge & Co., London). In World War I he was commissioned Captain in the Medical Corps of the American Red Cross, was head of the Children's Hospital at Evian, France and was decorated by the French Government with the Cross of the Legion of Honor. He was one of the organizers of the Bach Society in Pasadena, served on the board of the first Los Angeles Symphony Association and was one of the prime movers of music development in that city. His chief interests after retiring from active medical practice were the study of horology and music, and his home became a Musical center where he installed a four-manual chamber organ and where frequent recitals were given under the auspices of the American Guild of Organists, both by Dr. Mixsell and by many celebrated organists. He wrote a great deal of music which, with the exception of an aria and two compositions published in France, he preferred not to publish. He was author of various books and articles in the medical field, and of a book "Folk Songs of the Mojave Tribe" (J. F. Harbison Co., Los Angeles). He was a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society, of London, a Colleague of the American Guild of Organists and a member of the Los Angeles County Medical Society. He was one of the founders of the Santa Anita Race Track.

He was employed by the Cambria Steel Company, the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, and other industrial concerns, principally in New Mexico and Colorado. At the time of his death he was living in Denver, Colorado.

Children:

Helen Louise Owen, b. June 5, 1904

John Morgan Owen, b. Aug. 25, 1909

Edgar Palmer

Born: November 12, 1880, at New York
Died: January 8, 1943, at Princeton, N. J.
Occupation: President, New Jersey Zinc Company
Married: November 22, 1910, Zilph Hayes, Bronxville, N. Y.

"Pedlar" prepared for Princeton at the Taft School, entering with the Class in September, 1899. He received his B.S. degree in June, 1903, and his E.E. degree in 1905. He was a Member of Whig Hall and of the Cottage Club. On completing his graduate work in the electrical school at Princeton he became an Engineering Assistant with the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company in Pittsburgh and a year later entered the zinc business as an Engineer with the Empire Zinc Company in Canon City, Colo. In 1907 he became Assistant to the General Manager of the New Jersey Zinc Company, shortly thereafter was made Assistant to the President and in 1912 became President, an office he held for fifteen years until, in 1927, he was made Chairman of the Board. He was an Officer and Director of many Corporations, his Directorships including the Seamen's Bank for Savings and the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company, both of New York City. He was a Member of the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers. In World War I he was head of many Industrial Advisory Committees, including the Zinc Advisory Committee. He was a Charter Trustee of Princeton University and a Trustee of Stevens Institute of Technology. The Palmer Stadium was given by him to the University in memory of his father, Stephen Squires Palmer. The Palmer Laboratory, given to Princeton by "Pedlar's" father, also bears the family name. In 1937 "Pedlar" gave to Stevens Institute a dormitory building, Palmer Hall. The Princeton Inn was one of the results of his activity in the interest of the University and of the town of Princeton. So was the Nassau Tavern. Palmer Square, conceived by him as a basic town improvement and privately financed, was another of his public spirited and far-sighted projects, the buildings in keeping with classic colonial tradition replacing many old and dilapidated structures that marred Princeton's business center. The bronze tiger on the Nassau Street side of Palmer Square was presented to the town in his memory by his classmates and friends. The casting of the tiger in metal not otherwise available at the time (1944) because of the war was made possible by the contribution of pieces of bronze, large and small, hunted out from attics and cellars, including metal salvaged from the gymnasium fire. Two aeronautical engineering laboratories, east of the Palmer Stadium, were given to the University in memory of Edgar Palmer by Mrs. Eugene H. B. Watson, Mrs. Palmer's sister. He was elected Vice President of the Class in 1923 and in 1938 became our President for the succeeding five-year term. He was an enthusiastic yachtsman. His last yacht, the 200-foot three-masted schooner, served for four years with honor in the U. S. Navy and was listed under her old name as U.S.S. Guinevere. For many years before his death he made his home in Princeton.

William Abbott Pancoast

Died: July 11, 1906
Occupation: Business

Bill prepared for Princeton at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899. He left in 1900, to become associated with W. A. Pancoast & Co., of Philadelphia. He made his home in Camden, N. J.

Norman Hulick Parke

Born: August 26, 1878, at Pittston, Pa.
Occupation: Manufacturing and Business Administration — Retired Residence: St. James, Long Island, N. Y.
Married: April 28, 1903, Julia Floyd Phyfe of New York City

Norm prepared for college at the Susquehanna Collegian Institute, Towanda, Pa., the Harry Hillman Academy, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., and the Wilmington (Del.) Manual Training School. He was a Freshman at Center College, Kentucky, when he was called out with his regiment, the 13th Pennsylvania, for service in the Spanish-American War. He volunteered for service with the Governor's Troop, Pennsylvania Cavalry, and at the conclusion of nine months in the West Indies was Aide to Gen. John B. Castleman of Kentucky. He entered Princeton from the Princeton Summer School in the fall of 1899, taking a special course in Civil Engineering and leaving in 1902. He was a Member of the Colonial Club, the Honor Committee and the Inter-Club Treaty Committee. After leaving Princeton he engaged for awhile in lumber and coal mining operations and in 1904 entered the tannery business in Great Bend, Pa., where he became the proprietor of the N. H. Parke Leather Company. He was active in civic affairs in Great Bend, served several terms as Mayor, was a Justice of the Peace and County Chairman of the Good Roads Commission. He originated the plan and negotiated the purchase by the State of the abandoned D. L. & W. right-of-way, the resulting highway being now known as the Lackawanna Trail north from Scranton, and is credited with originating the white highway center line. He was a Director of the First National Bank, Halstead, and of the American Bank of Commerce, Scranton. During the First World War he operated a plant in Pennsylvania near the New York State line, 15 miles south of Binghamton, on Government contracts, and served as County Chairman of the Red Cross and as County Chairman of Transportation, Fuel, Food and Liberty Loan Drives. In 1925 he organized a Boys' Camp and summer training school on Long Island. He later took up Industrial and Sales Engineering as a profession, making his home in Garden City, Long Island, then in Fairfield, Conn., and New Haven, Conn. During World War II he was attached to the Bureau of Ordnance, War Department, and served as Director of Priorities and Facility Service at Hartford, Conn. In 1943 he became Manager of Industrial Relations for the Underwood Elliot Fisher Company in Hartford, later forming his own concern for consulting work in the industrial and sales engineering field. For some time prior to retiring he was in charge of the Binghamton, N. Y., office of the Veterans Administration. Always deeply interested in Princeton, he served, while in Hartford, as Regional Representative of the Princeton University Personnel Index.

Norman Bruce Pitcairn

BORN: November 8, 1881, at Harrisburg, Pa.
DIED: February 16, 1948, at Clayton, Mo.
OCCUPATION: Railroad Executive
MARRIED: October 15, 1913, Mary Martin Leet, Hollidaysburg, Pa.; d. January 8, 1946

Norm prepared for Princeton at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of C.E. in June, 1903. He was a member of the Elm Club. In 1901 he began his career in railroading as a rodman with the Pennsylvania, working during his summer vacations, and on graduation entered the regular employ of that company, with which he continued for the following twenty-eight years, rising from rodman to General Superintendent of the Eastern Ohio Division. During that time he served in various capacities throughout the Pennsylvania System, an experience that resulted in his becoming one of America's leading and most thoroughly qualified railroad executives. In 1931 he left the Pennsylvania to become President of the Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Railroad and two years later was appointed Receiver of the Wabash Railway Company and the Ann Arbor R. R. Company. Under his leadership both of these companies were rehabilitated. The Wabash receivership was terminated in January, 1942, and that of the Ann Arbor Company the following year, and Norman was elected President of both companies, serving in that capacity until April, 1947, when he became Chairman of the Wabash. During these years he also served as President, Vice President, Director or Member of the Executive Committee of many other railroads and subsidiary companies. He was a leader among Princeton Alumni in the St. Louis area and at one time was President of the Princeton Club of St. Louis. He made his home in Clayton, Mo. In May, 1950, the Wabash Bridge over the Missouri River at St. Charles, Mo., which had been completed during Norman's administration, was officially christened "Pitcairn Bridge" as a permanent testimonial by the Board of Directors of the Wabash Railroad to his services.

"Bunny" prepared for Princeton at the Clearfield (Pa.) High School, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of B.S. cum laude in June, 1903. He was a member of Clio Hall and of the Chess Club. He was a Lynde debater, won the first Baird Prize for Disputation, was Second Junior Orator Medalist, and a Commencement Speaker. Following Princeton he studied at the Auburn Theological Seminary, graduating in 1906, and after serving as Instructor in Economics and Sociology at the American University, Beirut, Syria, took graduate work at Harvard, receiving the degree of A.M.; then returned to Beirut to become head of the Department of Social Science at the American University, serving in that capacity until 1917. During World War I he served in Syrian and Armenian relief for the American Red Cross and became Associate Chief of the Bureau of Economic Rehabilitation of the Devastated Areas, American Red Cross, Paris, France, with the rank of Captain. In 1920, he was made Supervisor of Education, Red Cross Institute for the Blind, Baltimore, Maryland, the national school for re-education of men blinded in the war, and in 1922, upon that school being taken over by the U. S. Veterans Bureau to be operated as the Evergreen School for the Blind, became Superintendent of that institution. In 1927, when the St. Petersburg (Fla.) Junior College was founded, he joined its Faculty as Professor of History and Dean of the College, and in 1935, became its President. Under his administration the College became the only Accredited Junior College in Florida, and during World War II, was largely devoted to the instruction of military aviators. He was a member of the Florida Academy of Sciences and of the Post-war Education Committee of the Florida Unit of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. He was president of the St. Petersburg Civic Arts Center.

Arthur Benjamin Reeve

Born: October 15, 1880, at Patchogue, Long Island, N. Y.
Died: August 9, 1936, at Trenton, N. J.
Occupation: Writer
Married: January 31, 1906, Margaret Allen Wilson, at Trenton, N. J.

Arthur prepared for college at the Boy's High School, Brooklyn, N. Y., entering Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of A.B. magna cum laude in June, 1903. He was a Member of Clio Hall, winner of the Lyman H. Atwater Prize, and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. After graduation from Princeton he studied law for a year at the New York Law School, then devoted himself to the literary field, becoming Assistant Editor of "Public Opinion." The acceptance of a story by the Cosmopolitan Magazine started him on a long career of fiction writing, during which he wrote more than forty novels and collections of short stories, mainly of the kind now known as "who-dun-its." His Craig Kennedy stories gained wide popularity and for upwards of a decade the Sherlock-Holmesian character he created held the field against all comers as a fictional scientific detective. Besides scores of stories dealing with his own fictional character he reviewed the famous cases of William J. Burns, head of the detective agency and the exploits of Houdini the Magician. He collaborated with Charles W. Goddard (Dartmouth '02) on the writing of the almost endless episodes known as the "Exploits of Elaine" in the early days of the motion picture industry, and wrote or collaborated in the writing of many other motion picture serials. In later years he wrote for various newspapers, reviewing past mysteries and commenting on new cases as they developed, and was one of the leading reporters in the Hauptmann trial. During World War I he served in the Office of Naval Intelligence, his work leading to the establishment of a laboratory along the lines of his imaginative Craig Kennedy.

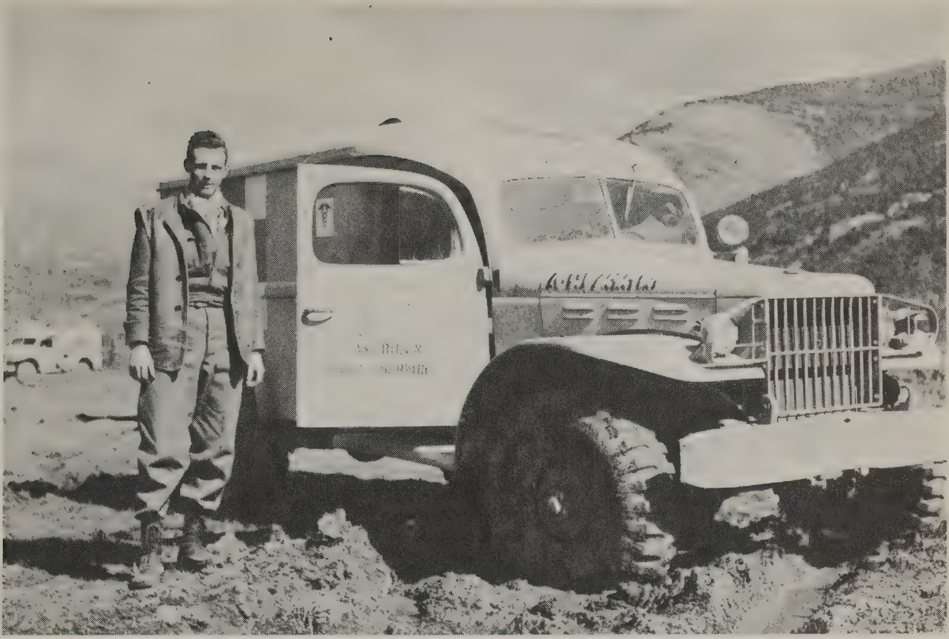
Married: August 13, 1904, Maggie Lucinda Bender, at Garfield, Pa.

Harvey, before entering college, was largely self-taught, his final preparation for Princeton being at Perkiomen Seminary. He entered with the Class in September, 1899, and received his degree of A.B. in June, 1903, with high honors in Mathematics. He was Fellow in Experimental Science, Princeton University, 1903-1904, having won the Class of 1860 Fellowship, received his A.M. degree in 1904, and was Instructor in Physics, Princeton, 1904-1905. For the following three years he took graduate work in Physics at Johns Hopkins University where he received the degree of Ph.D. in 1908; then taught at the University of Missouri until 1917, rising to the rank of Associate Instructor, when he went with the Westinghouse Lamp Company, in charge of their Research Department. A few years later he established that Company's laboratories at Bloomfield, N. J., of which he remained in charge until his retirement from the Westinghouse Electrical Corporation in 1947, to become a Visiting Professor of Physics at Princeton. Among



THE ALEXANDER STOBO AMBULANCE
in the Cassino Pass

The name plate on the ambulance is inscribed "In Memory of Alexander Stobo, 1st Lt. F.A., 1st Div. AEF. Donated by the Class of 1903 Princeton University."

The ambulance began its career with the American Field Service in the Becca Valley, Syria, October 13, 1943. In November it was ordered to Italy, where it served first with the British 49 General Hospital in Naples, then with the British 2 General Hospital in Caserta. In March 1944 it went into front-line duty in the Cassino area, was repeatedly hit by shell-fire, and at one time was pierced by a dozen or more fragments during a German barrage. It continued with the Allied forces until the Germans in Italy were completely crushed, and did its last work in the mountains of Austria in the early summer of 1945.

It had traveled some 25,000 miles and had carried more than 1,500 sick or wounded soldiers — men of many nations — Americans, British, Canadians, French, New Zealanders, South Africans, Poles.

During much of its career it was attached to the Platoon and later the Company commanded by Ward Chamberlin's son, Ward B. Chamberlin, III, '43 (Major, American Field Service), who stands beside the ambulance in the above photograph.

his notable contributions to science was the method of refining uranium and other rare metals, developed with the assistance of Dr. John W. Marden in 1922. This technique was employed to produce the first uranium used by the Manhattan Project in World War II, and Harvey's work was an important factor in accelerating the production of the atom bomb. Having received, in 1942, an urgent call for pure uranium in quantity, he put together makeshift contrivances which stepped up the laboratory uranium output from a few grams to 500 pounds daily. He was a pioneer in the application of radiant energy for bactericidal purposes and in the development of apparatus for this use. His contributions in this field range from the preservation of food by sterilizing lamps to the use of ultra-violet light to prevent spread of contagious diseases. He patented more than a hundred inventions in ultra-violet, infra-red and X-ray equipment, his work including also the application of photo-electric cells to burglar alarms, industrial safety control and automatic counting devices. He received many recognitions for his scientific achievements, including the award by the Franklin Institute of the Frank P. Brown Medal and the Silver W, highest award of the Westinghouse Manufacturing Company. He was a member of the American Optical Society, the American Physical Society, the American Institute of Science, Sigma Xi, and the New York Electrical Society, of which he was a Past President. He was made Honorary D. Sc., by Princeton University in 1941, and the following year the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on him by Ursinus College.

Daniel Miner Rogers

Born: April 25, 1882, at New Britain, Conn.
Died: April 15, 1909, at Adana, Turkey
Occupation: Missionary
Married: May 29, 1908, Mary Phelps Christie, at Palmer, Mass.

Miner entered Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, and received his A.B. degree in June, 1903. In college he was President of the Bird Club and was active in religious work. Upon graduation he entered the Hartford (Conn.) Theological Seminary and during his Junior year there was President of his Class. He was graduated from the Seminary in 1906, and in September of that year was ordained to the ministry. For awhile he served as Minister of a church in East Dorset, Vermont, then volunteered for the Foreign Mission field and in 1908, was commissioned for work in Asiatic Turkey. On arrival at Tarsus he was placed in charge of St. Paul's Institute and later went to Hadjin, where he continued his missionary work. He was at Adana, near Hadjin attending a conference of mission workers, when fighting broke out between the Turks and the Armenians, with looting and the starting of many incendiary fires. While attempting to extinguish a fire that had started in the house of an aged Turkish woman, Miner and another Missionary were deliberately shot down. A bronze tablet to his memory was placed by the Class in the then standing Marquand Chapel, and this having been destroyed when the Chapel burned in 1920, a new tablet was cast and is now in the University Chapel, a continuing memorial to our martyred classmate.

Princeton University

THE ROBERTS BOWL

Established by Isaac W. Roberts on the occasion of the birth of his youngest son, Howard Henry Roberts, born December 18, 1926, to be passed on from boy to boy as sons were thereafter born to members of the Class and to become the permanent possession of the last one. The Bowl was officially presented to the Class at the 25th Reunion and has been held by nineteen of its sons, their names and birthdays being engraved upon it. It has served many practical uses, once to baptize one of the boys, another time to hold champagne, while the mother of another possessor used it for flowers. Twice it has been in the family of Garfield Scott, while the present holder and heir-apparent is the second of the sons of Robert Cassilly to hold the Bowl. The full list follows:

He was a Member of Whig Hall and of the Tiger Inn, played on the Freshman Football Team, was Manager of the University Baseball Team and entitled to wear the Varsity P. He was President of the University Athletic Association, a Member of the Class Day Committee and an usher at President Wilson's inauguration. For some years after graduation he worked as a Bank Teller and Assistant Cashier, became a Manufacturer's Representative in Pittsburgh, and from 1913 to 1916 was Secretary and Treasurer of the Universal Appliance Company in that city. He then entered the insurance business, representing the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company and later the Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance Company in Pittsburgh. At the time of his death he was connected with the Pennsylvania Department of Forests and Waters, having retired from the insurance business.

Bill prepared for Princeton at Western University of Pennsylvania, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree cum laude in June, 1903. He was entitled to wear the Phi Beta Kappa key. After graduation he studied law at the Pittsburgh Law School and later practiced his profession in Tulsa, Oklahoma. His paternal home was Pittsburgh.

Jay Fletcher Slee

Born: November 28, 1880, at Elmira, N. Y.
Died: October 20, 1943, at Hamilton, Ontario
Occupation: Industrialist
Married: October 10, 1912, Minnie-Mae Hankin, at Sakchi, India

Jay, or "Ick" as he was known to his classmates, prepared for college at Mercersburg Academy, entering Princeton with the class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree in June, 1903. He was a Member of the Cannon Club, of which he was Treasurer. Upon graduation he became associated with the coke-making industry, in which he was to spend his life, becoming a pioneer in various branches of this field. He was soon recognized in the United States, Great Britain and Canada as an outstanding authority on by-product coke oven operation. His early experience in the industry was with the Empire Coke Company of Geneva, N. Y., and later with the Pittsburgh Gas and Coke Company of McKeesport, Pa. In 1908, he was selected as one of the American engineers who were charged with the establishment of the great Tata Iron and Steel Works at Sakchi, (now Jamshedpur), India, which has become the largest single steel-producing plant in the British Empire, a monument to the men who constructed it. Jay, on completion of the Tata Works, remained as Superintendent of the coke ovens until 1916, when he returned to America and became associated with the Steel Company of Canada, supervising the construction of the Company's coke ovens at Hamilton, Ontario, later being Superintendent of both the blast furnaces and coke ovens. He was a member of the Eastern States Blast Furnace and Coke Association. His home was at Hamilton, Ontario, where his son was born, to be registered, however, as an American citizen "within twenty minutes of his arrival."

Charles Carroll Smith

Born: September 7, 1881, at Elmer, N. J.
Died: February 17, 1942, at Bridgeton, N. J.
Occupation: Banker

Charlie prepared for Princeton at the Temple Preparatory School, Philadelphia, Pa., entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his A.B. degree cum laude in June, 1903. He was a member of Clio Hall and was one of our Commencement Orators. After graduation he spent some years with the Public Service Corporation in southern New Jersey. He then became Treasurer of the Rufus W. Smith Company of Elmer, N. J. and subsequently President and Trust Officer of the First National Bank of Elmer. He was active in civic affairs, was engaged in Red Cross work in both world Wars, and was a Trustee of the Elmer Methodist Church.

Albridge Clinton Smith, Jr.

Born: November 17, 1881, at Dover, N. J.
Died: June 4, 1951, at New York City
Occupation: Lawyer
Married: October 20, 1910, Frances Dean Halsey, at Orange, N. J.

Al prepared for Princeton at the Newark (N. J.) Academy, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his degree of A.B. in June, 1903. He was a member of the Cottage Club and of the Freshman and University Glee Clubs and the Triangle Club and was Vice President of the Class in Senior year. He received the degree of LL.B. from the New York Law School in 1905, was admitted to the New York Bar in that year and to the New Jersey Bar in 1906. For some years he was associated with his father in the practice of law, then entered the law office of Byrne and Cutcheon in New York City, becoming a member of the firm in 1916, and of successor firms, ultimately Humes, Smith and Andrews. Throughout his life, after graduation from Princeton, he played an active and a major part in the affairs of the University and of its Alumni. From 1903 to 1913, he was Vice President of the Class, and its President from 1928 to 1933. From 1913 to 1919, he was Class Representative on the Graduate Council, and in 1933, was made a Charter Trustee of the University, serving until his death. He was a member of the Finance Committee of the Trustees and for some years, until his death, was Clerk of the Trustees. He was one of the organizers of the Princeton University Fund and its Chairman from 1940 to 1943. He was one of the organizers also of the Princeton Alumni Association of the Oranges. The Tin Horn was his idea, the first issue of which, edited by him, came out in March 1912. For many years he managed, with great tact and sympathy, the Class Fund. Although Princeton and the Class became his life avocation, he found time to be active in civic affairs. He was for thirty years President of the Board of Assessment Commissioners of South Orange, was a Trustee of the Orange Y.M.C.A., a member of the advisory board of the Orange Day Nursery, and President of the Board of Trustees of the Hillside Presbyterian Church of Orange.

He was a Member of the Cap and Gown Club and of the Gymnasium and Hockey Teams. After graduation he studied at the Colorado School of Mines and was engaged in mining engineering work from 1904 to 1908, following which he was engaged in executive capacities with electric public utilities in Colorado and Nebraska until 1922, when he was made General Manager of the Bush Electric Company of Cleveland, Ohio. In 1928, he went to Florida to become Executive Vice President of the Florida Power Corporation (of which he later was President) and Executive Vice President of the Georgia Power and Light Co., the Florida West Coast Ice Co., and the West Florida Power Co. In 1937, he was elected President of the Virginia Public Service Company and the following year was appointed Chief Engineer of the Power Division, U. S. Public Works Administration. In 1941, he was re-instated as Executive Vice President of the Virginia Public Service Company, after becoming associated with the Trustees of the parent Associated Gas and Electric Corporation. Meanwhile he had served as Vice President of the Utility Management Corporation, the principal management organization of the A. G. & E. System. From 1944 to 1950, he was Director of Public Utilities of the Council-Manager Government of the City of St. Petersburg, Florida. Since 1950, he has been engaged in professional engineering and is now retained by the Pinellas County Taxpayers' Association. During World War I, he enlisted for naval service, but the armistice intervened before he was ordered to report for active duty.

John Ewing Steen

BORN: November 2, 1881, at Wysox, Pa.
OCCUPATION: Clergyman — Retired
RESIDENCE: 611 Railroad Avenue, Haverford, Pa.

John prepared for college at Lawrenceville and entered Princeton with the Class in September, 1899. He received his A.B. degree in June 1903. He was a Member of Whig Hall, the Cap and Gown Club, the Junior Fortnightly, the Monday Night Club, of which he was Secretary, and the Philadelphian Society of which he was President. He was Undergraduate Editor of the Alumni Weekly and Associate Editor of the Daily Princetonian. In Sophomore and Senior years he was Washington's Birthday Debater and in Junior year Yale Debater, and at Commencement was the '76 Prize Debater. For two years after graduation he was a graduate student at the University, receiving the degree of A.M. in 1905, and during the same period was General Secretary of the Philadelphian Society. In 1905, he went to Japan to teach in Y.M.C.A. and Government schools and in 1906 taught English in the Higher Commercial School at Kobe, Japan. Returning to the United States, he studied for the ministry at the Union Theological Seminary, New York City where he received the degree of B.D. in 1909. He was ordained to the Presbyterian ministry in October of the following year and from 1909 to 1917, was Minister of the Church of the Sea and Land in New York City. During World War I, he served as Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in the A.E.F., and later as Division Secretary, First Division, and was overseas in France and Germany from October 1917 to August 1919. On returning from war duty he engaged for a year in Near East Relief work and in 1920, became Minister of the Briarcliff Manor Congregational Church, New York. From 1926 to 1941, he was Assistant Minister of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church of Brooklyn, N. Y. In 1938, he was Moderator of the Brooklyn-Nassau Presbytery, and from 1943 to 1945, served as war-time Minister of the Presbyterian Church at Islip, Long Island. He retired in 1946 and has since then lived, first in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y. and later at Haverford, Pa., spending his winters in Tucson, Arizona.

Alexander Stobo

Born: July 8, 1880, at Hoboken, N. J.
Died: April 22, 1932, at New York City
Occupation: Business

"Alec" prepared for college at the Montclair Academy, entering Princeton with the Class in September, 1899, and receiving his B.S. degree in June, 1903. He was a Member of the Cannon Club. On graduation he went with the Standard Oil Company and later with the Corn Products Refining Company. During World War I, he was a First Lieutenant in the Field Artillery, having attended the First Officers' Training Camp at Plattsburg. Upon conclusion of the camp he was one of its graduates selected for immediate service in France. He was sent first to the French Field Artillery School at Fontainebleau and later to the First Corps Artillery School at Goudrecourt; then assigned to the Fifth Field Artillery of the First Division. He spent 220 days at the front, participating in every action in which the First Division was engaged, beginning in the Toul sector and including Montdidier, Soissons, St. Mihiel and the Argonne. He was deeply interested in Class affairs, was Secretary and Reunion Chairman from 1923 to 1928, and served as one of the Class Trustees from 1928 until his death. In Alec's memory his sister, Mrs. Phillip L. James, founded the Alexander Stobo Memorial Scholarship in 1933, in the awarding of which it was stipulated that "preference is to be given to applicants who are sons of the members of the Class of 1903." Accordingly several sons of the Class have been thus assisted in obtaining their education at Princeton. When the United States entered World War II, the Class gave to the American Field Force an ambulance bearing a plaque that read "In memory of Alexander Stobo, 1st Lt. F.A. 1st Div. A.E.F. Donated by the Class of 1903, Princeton University." Alec's Ambulance began its career with the American Field Force in Syria in 1943, went through the entire Italian campaign, including front line duty in the Cassino area and in the northern Apennines, and was repeatedly "wounded" by enemy shell fire. During much of its active service it was attached to the battalion in which served Ward Chamberlin's son, Major Ward B. Chamberlin, III. It did its last job in the mountains of Austria in the early summer of 1945, having carried wounded men of many nations; American, British, Scotch, Canadian, French, New Zealanders, South African, Polish. On being released from the American Eighth Army, the veteran ambulance was finally turned over to the British Army, having nobly fulfilled its task of reflecting the spirit of Alec. Stabo.

Born: May 28, 1879, at Marion, N. Y.
Died: May 21, 1950
Occupation: Teacher of Philosophy and Psychology
Married: July 15, 1908, Norah McCarter, at Castlerock, County Derry, North Ireland

"Spike" prepared for college at Knox Preparatory School, Galesburg, Ill., and Bradley Institute, Peoria, Ill., entering Princeton in 1901 from the University of Chicago. He received his degree of A.B. cum laude in June, 1903, with the Class. He was a Member of Whig Hall and of the Orphic Order. On leaving Princeton he went to Germany for graduate study at the University of Leipzig, where he received the degree of Ph.D. in 1906, later continuing his studies at Oxford. He and Henry Leach made a walking tour through many parts of England and Scotland. From 1906 to 1912 he taught at Williams College, gathering around him a group of young men interested in creative writing, thus forming The New Coffee Club. From Williams he went to Mount Holyoke College at South Hadley, Mass., where he became Professor of Philosophy and Psychology and was Head of the Department from 1936 until he became Emeritus in 1944. For several years he was also Visiting Professor of Philosophy at Amherst College. His teaching career included the giving of a course of lectures at Yenching and at a number of other Chinese Universities. He lectured from time to time at various institutions and clubs, such as the Detroit Institute of Art, the American Art Association of New York, the Browning Society (of which he was an Honorary Member) and many collegiate institutions, and was a contributor to such magazines and journals as The Journal of Philosophy, The Harvard Theological Review, the American Magazine of Art, and the Forum. He travelled extensively in Europe and the Orient where he accomplished much in research in the History of Art. The results of his study of Greek Philosophy he embodied in an outstanding book, "The Searching Mind of Greece," published in 1930. A later book, published posthumously (Dec. 14, 1951, the Philosophical Library), "The Power of Art," has been characterized as containing the substance of a lifetime of observation and careful thought and the fruit of his ardent belief in the power of the arts to mold the character of peoples and civilizations. While his special field of scholarship was Philosophy, his field as a practicing artist was Music. A master of the pipe organ and a noted composer of organ music, he was also a leader in civic affairs in South Hadley, where he earned the reputation of being "the most neighborly man who ever tried to make the world his platform for teaching," and his home became a center for music lovers. He was one of the founders and for many years the President of the Holyoke League of Arts and Crafts.

He was a Member and at one time Director of the American Philosophical Association. The John Martyn Warbeke 1903 Prize in Esthetics was established and endowed in 1953 by Mrs. Warbeke in his memory.

Robert Spencer Young

BORN: December 15, 1880, at Greenville, N. J.
DIED: March 13, 1949
OCCUPATION: Clergyman
MARRIED: August 25, 1915, Marion Robinson-Dent Johnson, at Nutley, N. J.; d. July, 1951

"Parson" Young prepared for Princeton at the Newark (N. J.) Academy and at Lawrenceville, entering with the Class in September, 1899, and graduating with the degree of A.B. in June, 1903. He was entitled to wear the Class numerals, was a Member of the Track Team and took a first in the running broad jump in the 1900 and 1901 Caledonian Games. After graduating from Princeton he studied for the ministry at the Auburn Theological Seminary and at the Divinity School of the University of Glasgow, Scotland; served for a time as Pastor of the Broad Avenue Presbyterian Church, Binghamton, N. Y.; as Associate Pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian Church, Newburgh, N. Y., and as Assistant Pastor of the Central Presbyterian Church of Newark, N. J. He made a missionary tour of the Orient in 1915 and in 1917 entered upon what was to be his life work as Pastor of the Yellow Frame Church, near Newton, N. J., one of the oldest of New Jersey's churches, dating back to 1750, the sermon at the installation, in 1787, of its first regular pastor, the Rev. Ira Condit, having been preached by John Witherspoon, then President of Princeton College. "Parson" Young's calling to the ministry had the background of ancestry, a long line of Scotch-Presbyterian preachers, and he once had the privilege of occupying the pulpit from which his grandfather and his great-grandfather had expounded the Scriptures. During his long pastorate he travelled extensively, preaching in many churches throughout the United States and in Scotland, China and Japan.
